Abstract

The occurrence of human and animal figures displaying various kinds of day-to-day activities like hunting, gathering, pastoral lifestyle etc., are pictographs or petroglyphs or geoglyphs on the rock surface. Such examples of rock art provide visual representation of a particular place, particular time, and the authors responsible. Rock art plays a vital role in the study of human beliefs and practices, especially of prehistoric cultures. Rock art continued during historic times and is practiced even today by a few communities. It is widely known that rock art was one of the mediums to communicate and represent an understanding of the surroundings; it also reflects ritualistic beliefs and ideas of the past populations. Therefore, rock art is an indispensable source of information in our understanding of some aspects of prehistoric life that is usually not known from other kinds of prehistoric material evidence.

Introduction

Other than the regions of south-western Europe, Russia, North Africa and Australia; India is a major region of rock art in the global context and the country is placed as the biggest centre for rock art in Asia. Indian rock art sites are known for their uniqueness and for its comprehensive communication (Brooks and Wakankar 1976; Chakravarty and Bednarik 1997). In magnitude, vividness, and richness this art form offers substantial source material for our study and perhaps 'the only consistent record left of the developing human mind' (Bednarik 2002). A dense rock art concentration is found in the Vindhyan range, the eastern part of India and in the peninsular region where art is found in the form of pictographs and petroglyphs. In the global context, India as a whole and Karnataka in particular, as a part are known for a large number of discoveries and appreciation of prehistoric and protohistoric rock art.

In India, Karnataka has the largest concentration of rock art followed by Madhya Pradesh. In Karnataka, more than 250 rock art sites have been reported (Fig. 1). Here, an attempt has been made to present an overview of rock art research in Karnataka on the basis of the geographical location of rock art zones like river basins, doab, central, coastal and south Karnataka.

The first reported discovery of rock art in Karnataka, which happened to be the first such reported occurrence in Southern India, was made by Fawcett at Kappagallu near Ballari in 1892. Robert Bruce Foote (1916) also briefly addressed the Kappagallu rock art pictures in his book on 'The Foote Collection of Indian Prehistoric and Protohistoric antiquities, Notes on their Ages and Distributions'.

The Malaprabha River Basin

Early research on rock art in the Malaprabha Basin began in the last quarter of the 20th century. Wakankar explored the Badami region in 1976 (Brooks and Wakankar 1976). This

Thunder and Herds Lawrence L. Loendorf, 2016-07-22 This volume is the first summary and synthesis of the rock art of the American High Plains from Archaic times to the historic period Even more it presents an engaging combination of Plains archaeology rock art sites and holistic archaeological research This refreshing approach to rock art studies reminds us that archaeologists glean information from the whole site and everything that may have occurred there rather than simply focusing on the images on stone Clues to understanding rock art can be found in other images in associated artifacts and in ethnographic analogy Archaeologists are shown how rock art integrates with other materials available for study With each page the reader will be engaged in a compelling and comprehensive story that focuses equally on the art and the archaeology of the prehistoric plains

An Engraved Landscape: Rock carvings in the Wadi al-Ajal, Libya Tertia Barnett, 2023-02-23 An Engraved Landscape is a contextual analysis of a substantial new corpus of engravings from the Wadi al Ajal situated in the Central Saharan region of south west Libya The wadi is renowned as the heartland of the Garamantian civilization which emerged from local mobile

Pastoral communities in the 1st millennium BC and dominated trans Saharan trade and politics for over a thousand years Extensive archaeological and palaeoenvironmental investigations in recent years have provided detailed insight into the later prehistory and protohistory of the wadi and surrounding areas However prior to the fieldwork detailed in this work only a handful of carvings had been recorded in the wadi This work is based on systematic survey conducted between 2004 and 2009 which recorded around 2 500 previously unknown or unpublished engraved and inscribed rock surfaces All forms of engraving whether figurative or surface markings were viewed as significant residues of human interaction with the rock surface and were recorded The resulting database provides an opportunity to analyze the engravings in relation to their changing physical and cultural contexts and the discussion offers a fresh interpretation of Saharan rock art based on this substantial new evidence An Engraved Landscape also captures in detail a unique heritage resource that is currently inaccessible and threatened This record of the fragile engravings provides an important source of information for researchers and students

New Perspectives on Prehistoric Art Günter Berghaus, 2004-04-30 Following the discovery of Franco Caribbean cave art in the nineteenth century standard interpretations of these works usually revolved around hunting magic and fertility cults Orthodox positions such as these have weighed heavily on later generations of art historians archaeologists and anthropologists even those whose views dissented from those of their predecessors In the last few decades however new approaches to cave art often based on discoveries made in Africa Asia Australia North America and the Arctic region have produced new insights into possible meanings and functions of prehistoric paintings and sculptures This new collection of essays explores these insights gathering the observations of eight experts from a variety of disciplines and examining some of the social and spiritual functions of a variety of artistic genres ranging from 40 000 B C to 5 000 B C These insights which derive from evolutionary biology feminist scholarship ritual studies and new modes of anthropology argue collectively that prehistoric art was a culture specific form of communication that should be interpreted in the social context of early hunter gatherer societies and should not be measured with the criteria and paradigms of modern art Essential reading for anyone interested in prehistoric art or its cultural implications this volume represents a bold step forward in the research and analysis of the very first artists

Land and Language in Cape York Peninsula and the Gulf Country Jean-Christophe Verstraete, Diane Hafner, 2016-02-18 This volume offers a state of the art survey of linguistic anthropological archaeological and historical work focused on Cape York Peninsula and the Gulf Country in Australia's northeast The volume also honours Bruce Rigsby emeritus professor of anthropology at the University of Queensland whose work has inspired all of the contributors The papers in the volume are organized in terms of five key themes including the use of historical and archaeological methods to reconstruct aspects of language and social organization anthropological and linguistic work uncovering aspects of world view embedded in languages and ethnographic data sets the study of post contact transformations in language and society and the return of archival data to communities Its thematic intersections draw together the varied disciplinary threads in an overview of the cultures and languages of the region and will appeal to all those interested in Australian Aboriginal studies linguistics anthropology and associated disciplines
