

For the White Ball the Columbia Court of Love was decorated entirely in white and guests were commanded to wear all white costumes. The evening touch was a small party, which never set sail.
Roughly overlooked the sea but not the harbor with its sailing yachts. These however, struck that white sails and masts must form the backdrop glimpsed through the tall windows of her ballroom. She ordered a dozen full-scale ships with white hulls and sails, in mock-up form, built for one night's display. Placed in front of her white marble balustrade and brilliantly lighted, they looked like a white fleet about to sail into the ballroom.
