Port Construction and Repair U. s. Army Engineer School, 2005 This manual is a guide and basic reference for engineer units building and rehabilitating ship unloading and cargo handling facilities in the theaters of operations It includes port planning and layout and construction of freed and floating wharves to support both conventional and container ships It covers the special problems of expedient construction of ports and railways on wharves and piers The information concerning facilities for handling and shipping cargo in containers represents current development The manual covers many techniques still in the concept stage The user is cautioned to get the latest information before proceeding with plans The material applies to both nuclear and nonnuclear warfare however in nuclear warfare port construction would be confined to small ports not offering strategic targets to the enemy Obtaining adequate ports early in any overseas operation is very important Securing and using already existing ports is usually better than securing a site and building a new port by conventional methods Old ports require less material time and personnel Old ports often have towns nearby as well as shore facilities such as warehouses roads railways and petroleum oil and lubricants terminals New ports lack all these facilities Generally new ports and temporary landing facilities serve only in the initial phase of an invasion and follow up logistics over the shore operations Since established ports are better beach sites are abandoned as ports as soon as established ports are acquired or rehabilitated Current trends in commercial shipping indicate that 90 percent of all cargo arriving in future theater of operations will arrive by container This method of shipping requires dock and road surfaces capable of withstanding great loads It also requires heavy lift equipment capable of transferring the largest loaded container 40 feet 67 200 pounds from ships up to 1 000 feet long and 115 feet wide Current Army facilities components system port designs must be changed to support such an operation

Port Construction and Repair (FM 5-480) Department of the Army, 2012-12-09 This manual Port Construction and Repair FM 5 480 is a guide and basic reference for engineer units building and rehabilitating ship unloading and cargo handling facilities in the theaters of operations TO It includes port planning and layout and construction of freed and floating wharves to support both conventional and container ships It covers the special problems of expedient construction of ports and railways on wharves and piers The information concerning facilities for handling and shipping cargo in containers represents current development The manual covers many techniques still in the concept stage The user is cautioned to get the latest information before proceeding with plans The material applies to both nuclear and nonnuclear warfare however in nuclear warfare port construction would be confined to small ports not offering strategic targets to the enemy Obtaining adequate ports early in any overseas operation is very important Securing and using already existing ports is usually better than securing a site and building a new port by conventional methods Old ports require less material time and personnel Old ports often have towns nearby as well as shore facilities such as warehouses roads railways and petroleum oil and lubricants POL terminals New ports lack all these facilities Generally new ports and temporary landing facilities serve only in the initial phase of an invasion and follow up logistics over the shore operations. LOTS Since established ports are better beach sites are abandoned as ports as soon as established ports are acquired or rehabilitated. Current trends in commercial shipping indicate that 90 percent of all cargo arriving in future TO will arrive by container. This method of shipping requires dock and road surfaces capable of withstanding great loads. It also requires heavy lift equipment capable of transferring the largest loaded container 40 feet 67 200 pounds from ships up to 1 000 feet long and 115 feet wide. Current Army facilities components system AFCS port designs must be changed to support such an operation. Port Construction and Repair, 1999 Port Engineering Gregory P.
