

RHETORICAL DEVICES IN PUBLIC SPEAKING

The following are the most commonly used rhetorical techniques (also known as rhetorical devices) in public speaking:

ALLITERATION repeats the same sound or letter at the beginning of several words in sequence.

- Let us go forth to lead the land we love . . . - J. F. Kennedy
- My style is public negotiations for parity, rather than private negotiations for position.
- Jesse Jackson
- We want no parlay with you and your grisly gang who work your wicked will . . . - Sir Winston Churchill

ALLUSION is a short reference to a familiar person, place, thing, or event (the best sources for allusions are literature, history, Greek myth, and the Bible, as they must be easily understood). It is also important that the allusion explains, or enhances the subject under discussion without sidetracking the listener.

- You must borrow me Gargantua's mouth first, 'Tis a word too great for any mouth of this age's size - Shakespeare
- If you take his parking place, you can expect World War II all over again.

AMPLIFICATION repeats a word or expression while adding more detail to it, in order to emphasize something.

- I know I have but the body of a weak and feeble woman; but I have the heart of a king, and of a king of England, too. - Queen Elizabeth I

ANADIPLOSIS repeats one or several words that end one clause and begin another.

- Men in great place are thrice servants: servants of the sovereign or state; servants of fame; and servants of business. - Francis Bacon
- They call for you; the general who became a slave; the slave who became a gladiator; the gladiator who defied an Emperor. - from the movie Gladiator

ANALOGY is a kind of extended METAPHOR or long SIMILE in which a comparison is made between two things in order to develop a line of reasoning. While it is similar to simile, similes are generally more artistic and brief, while an analogy is longer and explains a thought process.

- Knowledge always desires increase; it is like fire, which must first be kindled by some external agent, but which will afterwards propagate itself. - Samuel Johnson

ANAPHORA repeats the same word or words at the beginning of successive phrases, or sentences, often alongside CLIMAX and PARALLELISM and using a TRICOLON.

- But one hundred years later, the Negro still is not free. One hundred years later, the life of the Negro is still sadly crippled by the manacles of segregation and the chains of discrimination. One hundred years later, the Negro lives on a lonely island of poverty in the midst of a vast ocean of material prosperity. One hundred years later, the Negro is still languished in the corners of American society and finds himself an exile in his own land. - Martin Luther King, Jr.
- But in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground . . . - Abraham Lincoln
