Over the last few decades, theory and research on learning and development has shifted from discrete and largely passive models of individual functioning to models that include the individual's goals and intentions, knowledge about the self and environment, ability to develop and change optimal strategies of action, etc. Whether this represents a paradigmatic revolution, in the sense of Kuhn (1967), or is a metatheoretical consideration (Valsiner, this volume), there is no doubt that modern thinking about learning and development has been heavily based on, and to some extent restricted by, cognitive psychology.

As a result, an enormous number of new ideas, concepts, models, and theories about how the cognitive system functions, how new information is selected, stored, and organized, and how these concepts relate to both school-based and informal learning has been developed (e.g., Anderson, 1976; Kintsch & Van Dijk, 1978; Rumelhart, 1977; Van Dijk & Kintsch, 1983). There is no doubt that this research has expanded our knowledge of learning and development significantly. On the other hand, its theoretical shortcomings also have been recognized recently by more and more researchers (e.g., Bransford, 1979; Brown, 1982; Brown, Collins, & Duguid, 1989; Hidi & Baird, 1986; Hidi, Baird, & Hildyard, 1982; Jenkins, 1979; Mandl, Stein, & Trabasso, 1984; Mandler, 1975; Sorrentino & Higgins, 1986; cf. Clark & Fiske, 1982; Csikszentmihalyi, 1988; Snow & Farr, 1987; Van Dijk & Kintsch, 1983). Perhaps the most

Role Of Interest In Learning And Development:

The Role of interest in Learning and Development K. Ann Renninger, Suzanne Hidi, Andreas Krapp, Ann Renninger, 2014-02-04 Interest is just emerging as a critical bridge between cognitive and affective issues in both learning and development This developing interest in interest appears to be linked to an increasing concern for studying the individual in context examining affective variables as opposed to purely structural features of text analyzing the interrelationship of cognitive and social development understanding practical applications of theories of motivation and recognizing the importance of developmental psychology for the study of learning This book addresses both how individual interest and interest inherent in stimuli books text toys etc across subjects affect cognitive performance While the book s particular emphasis is on theory driven research each of the contributing authors offers a unique perspective on understanding interest and its effects on learning and development As such each has contributed a chapter in which particular questions in interest research are described and linked to a clearly stated theoretical perspective and recent findings Relevant material from the broader literatures of psychology and education are analyzed in the context of these discussions In addition the introductory and concluding chapters build on the contributions to the volume by providing the basis of a coherent view of interest across genres such as stories and expository text and domains as varied as play reading and mathematics

Early Childhood Education Petr G. Grotewell, Yanus R. Burton, 2008 This book focuses on early childhood education which spans the human life from birth to age 8 Infants and toddlers experience life more holistically than any other age group Social emotional cognitive language and physical lessons are not learned separately by very young children Adults who are most helpful to young children interact in ways that understand that the child is learning from the whole experience not just that part of the experience to which the adult gives attention Although early childhood education does not have to occur in the absence of the parent or primary caregiver this term is sometimes used to denote education by someone other than these the parent or primary caregiver Both research in the field and early childhood educators view the parents as an integral part of the early childhood education process Early childhood education takes many forms depending on the theoretical and educational beliefs of the educator or parent Other terms that is often used interchangeably with early childhood education are early childhood learning early care and early education Much of the first two years of life are spent in the creation of a child s first sense of self or the building of a first identity Because this is a crucial part of children s makeup how they first see themselves how they think they should function how they expect others to function in relation to them early care must ensure that in addition to carefully selected and trained caregivers links with family home culture and home language are a central part of program policy If care becomes a substitute for rather than a support of family children may develop a less than positive sense of who they are and where they come from because of their child care experience Handbook of Motivation at School Kathryn R. Wentzel, David B. Miele, 2009-09-10 The Handbook of Motivation at School presents the first comprehensive and integrated compilation of theory and research on children s motivation at school It covers the major theoretical perspectives in the field as well as their application to instruction learning and social adjustment at school Key Features Comprehensive no other book provides such a comprehensive overview of theory and research on children s motivation at school Theoretical Applied the book provides a review of current motivation theories by the developers of those theories as well as attention to the application of motivation theory and research in classrooms and schools Chapter Structure chapters within each section follow a similar structure so that there is uniformity across chapters Commentaries each section ends with a commentary that provides clear directions for future research
