Murgatreuds Empire:

The Taste of Empire Lizzie Collingham, 2017-10-03 A history of the British Empire told through twenty meals eaten around the world In The Taste of Empire acclaimed historian Lizzie Collingham tells the story of how the British Empire's quest for food shaped the modern world Told through twenty meals over the course of 450 years from the Far East to the New World Collingham explains how Africans taught Americans how to grow rice how the East India Company turned opium into tea and how Americans became the best fed people in the world In The Taste of Empire Collingham masterfully shows that only by examining the history of Great Britain's global food system from sixteenth century Newfoundland fisheries to our present day eating habits can we fully understand our capitalist economy and its role in making our modern diets The Empire of the Self Christopher Star, 2012-12-01 Christopher Star uncovers significant points of contact between Seneca and Petronius two important Roman writers long thought to be antagonists In The Empire of the Self Christopher Star studies the question of how political reality affects the concepts of body soul and self Star argues that during the early Roman Empire the establishment of autocracy and the development of a universal ideal of individual autonomy were mutually enhancing phenomena The Stoic ideal of individual empire or complete self command is a major theme of Seneca's philosophical works The problematic consequences of this ideal are explored in Seneca's dramatic and satirical works as well as in the novel of his contemporary Petronius Star examines the rhetorical links between these diverse texts He also demonstrates a significant point of contact between two writers generally thought to be antagonists the idea that imperial speech structures reveal the self Beyond Science and Empire Matheus Alves Duarte da Silva, Thomás A. Haddad, Kapil Raj, 2023-09-23 Through ten case studies by international specialists this book investigates the circulation and production of scientific knowledge between 1750 and 1945 in the fields of agriculture astronomy botany cartography medicine statistics and zoology In this period most of the world was under some form of imperial control while science emerged as a discrete field of activity What was the relationship between empire and science Was science just an instrument for imperial domination While such guiding questions place the book in the tradition of science and empire studies it offers a fresh perspective in dialogue with global history and circulatory approaches The book demonstrates not by theoretical discourse but through detailed historical case studies that the adoption of a global scale of analysis or an emphasis on circulatory processes does not entail analytical vagueness diffusionism in disguise or complacency with imperialism The chapters show scientific knowledge emerging from the actions of little known individuals moving across several Empires European Asian and South American alike in unanticipated places and institutions and through complex processes of exchange competition collaboration and circulation of knowledge The book will interest scholars and undergraduate and graduate students concerned with the connections between the history of science imperial history and global history
