Regulating Privacy Data Protection And Public Policy In Europe And The United States:

Regulating Privacy Colin J. Bennett, 1992 The information revolution has brought with it the technology for easily collecting personal information about individuals a facility that inherently threatens personal privacy Colin J Bennett here examines political responses to the data protection issue in four Western democracies comparing legislation that the United States Britain West Germany and Sweden forged from the late 1960 s to the 1980 s to protect citizens from unwanted computer dissemination of personal information Drawing on an extensive body of interviews and documentary evidence Bennett considers how the four countries each with different cultural traditions and institutions formulated fair information policy He finds that their computer regulatory laws are based on strikingly similar statutory principles but that enforcement of these principles varies considerably the United States relies on citizen initiative and judicial enforcement Britain uses a registration system Germany has installed an ombudsman and Sweden employs a licensing system Tracing the impact of key social political and technological factors on the ways different political systems have controlled the collection and communication of information Bennett also deepens our understanding of policymaking theory Regulating Privacy will be welcomed by political sciences especially those working in comparative public policy American politics organization theory and technology and politics political economists information systems analysts and others concerned with issues of privacy

EU Personal Data Protection in Policy and Practice Bart Custers, Alan M. Sears, Francien Dechesne, Ilina Georgieva, Tommaso Tani, Simone van der Hof, 2019-02-28 In this book the protection of personal data is compared for eight EU member states namely France Germany the United Kingdom Ireland Romania Italy Sweden and the Netherlands The comparison of the countries is focused on government policies for the protection of personal data the applicable laws and regulations implementation of those laws and regulations and supervision and enforcement Although the General Data Protection Regulation GDPR harmonizes the protection of personal data across the EU as of May 2018 its open norms in combination with cultural differences between countries result in differences in the practical implementation interpretation and enforcement of personal data protection With its focus on data protection law in practice this book provides in depth insights into how different countries deal with data protection issues The knowledge and best practices from these countries provide highly relevant material for legal professionals data protection officers policymakers data protection authorities and academics across Europe Bart Custers is Associate Professor and Director of Research at the Center for Law and Digital Technologies of the Leiden Law School at Leiden University the Netherlands Alan M Sears Francien Dechesne Ilina Georgieva and Tommaso Tani are all affiliated to that same organization of which Professor Simone van der Hof is the General Director Consent in European Data Protection Law Eleni Kosta, 2013-03-21 Today consent is a fundamental concept in the European legal framework on data protection The analysis of the historical and theoretical context carried out in this book reveals that consent was not an intrinsic notion in the birth of data protection The concept of consent was included in data protection legislation in order to enhance the role of the data subject in the data protection arena and to allow the data subject to have more control over the collection and processing of his/her personal information. This book examines the concept of consent and its requirements in the Data Protection Directive taking into account contemporary considerations on bioethics and medical ethics as well as recent developments in the framework of the review of the Directive. It further studies issues of consent in electronic communications carrying out an analysis of the consent-related provisions of the ePrivacy Directive.

European Data Protection: In Good Health? Serge Gutwirth, Ronald Leenes, Paul de Hert, Yves Pouillet, 2012-02-23. Although Europe has a significant legal data protection framework built up around EU Directive 95/46/EC and the Charter of Fundamental Rights, the question of whether data protection and its legal framework are in good health is increasingly being posed. Advanced technologies raise fundamental issues regarding key concepts of data protection. Falling storage prices, increasing chips performance, the fact that technology is becoming increasingly embedded and ubiquitous, the convergence of technologies and other technological developments are broadening the scope and possibilities of applications rapidly. Society, however, is also changing, affecting the privacy and data protection landscape. The demand for free services, security, convenience, governance, etc., changes the mindsets of all the stakeholders involved. Privacy is being proclaimed dead or at least worthy of dying by the captains of industry. Governments and policy makers are having to manoeuvre between competing and incompatible aims, and citizens and customers are considered to be indifferent. In the year in which the plans for the revision of the Data Protection Directive will be revealed, the current volume brings together a number of chapters highlighting issues, describing and discussing practices, and offering conceptual analysis of core concepts within the domain of privacy and data protection. The book's first part focuses on surveillance, profiling and prediction; the second on regulation, enforcement and security; and the third on some of the fundamental concepts in the area of privacy and data protection. Reading the various chapters, it appears that the patient needs to be cured of quite some weak spots, illnesses and malformations. European data protection is at a turning point, and the new challenges are not only accentuating the existing flaws and the anticipated difficulties but also, more positively, the merits and the need for strong and accurate data protection practices and rules in Europe and elsewhere.

Private Regulation and Enforcement in the EU Madeleine de Cock Buning, Linda Senden, 2020-06-25. Globalisation and technological innovation have been fuelling the need for increasing levels of trust in private actors such as companies or special interest groups to regulate and enforce significant aspects of people's daily lives from environmental and social protection to the areas of food safety advertising and financial markets This book investigates the trust vested in private actors from the perspective of European citizens It answers the question of whether private actors live up to citizens' expectations or whether more should be done as to the safeguarding of citizens' interests Several cross-cutting studies explore how private regulation and enforcement are embedded in EU law The book offers an innovative approach to private regulation and enforcement by focusing on the specific EU context which unlike the national and transnational ones has not yet been widely explored This context merits a stand-alone analysis because of the unique normative framework of the EU as a particular polity itself but also in relation to its Member States With an overall analysis of the main aspects of private regulation and enforcement across different policy fields of the EU the book adds a missing tile to the mosaic of public-private governance studies

Transatlantic Regulation Susanne Lütz,2016-03-16 The European and American economies are closely interlinked as mutually important investment and trading partners The growing intensity of economic interdependence has spurred the transatlantic coordination of rules and standards that can lead to the formation of non tariff barriers to transatlantic commerce But despite impressive government to government efforts to eliminate market barriers the E U and the U S have frequently clashed over each other s regulatory policies The aim of this book is to explore the domestic sources of cooperation or conflict in transatlantic regulation The book analyses the role of domestic factors through three theoretical lenses that are well established in the study of multilevel systems the principal agent approach the two level game metaphor and through a wider concept of institutionalism which emphasises the links between societal interests and regulatory ideas with institutional frameworks The book states that domestic factors embody more obstacles than opportunities for horizontal coordination It is argued that transatlantic relations will likely undergo a double movement of being simultaneously shifted upwards to become part of the global governance architecture and downwards towards broader involvement of legislators in regulatory matters Hence transatlantic regulation might in the near future be shaped more by political leaders rent seeking interest groups and legislators than by networks of technocrats This book was published as a special issue of the Review of International Political Economy International Encyclopedia of Public Policy and Administration Volume 2 Jay M.

Bennett,Charles D. Raab,2017-11-01 This book was published in 2003 This book offers a broad and incisive analysis of the governance of privacy protection with regard to personal information in contemporary advanced industrial states Based on research across many countries it discusses the goals of privacy protection policy and the changing discourse surrounding the privacy issue concerning risk trust and social values It analyzes at length the contemporary policy instruments that together comprise the inventory of possible solutions to the problem of privacy protection It argues that privacy protection depends upon an integration of these instruments but that any country s efforts are inescapably linked with the actions of others that operate outside its borders The book concludes that in a globalizing world this regulatory interdependence could lead either to a search for the highest possible standard of privacy protection or to competitive deregulation or to a more complex outcome reflecting the nature of the issue and its policy responses Information Assurance and Security

A Threat Against Europe? J. Peter Burgess, 2011 The concept of security has traditionally referred to the status of sovereign states in a closed international system In this system the state is assumed to be both the object of security and the primary provider of security Threats to the state's security are understood as threats to its political autonomy in the system The major international institutions that emerged after the Second World War were built around this idea When the founders of the United Nations spoke of collective security they were referring primarily to state security and to the coordinated system that would be necessary in order to avoid the scourge of war But today a wide range of security threats both new and traditional confront Europe or at least as some would say
