Making Development Sustainable Johan Holmberg, 1992 Although the idea of sustainable development is by now well established discussions of how to progress from concept to reality often become mired in the complexities of global politics and offer few concrete solutions While achieving sustainable development will undoubtedly require changes at the global level the authors of this book emphasize that patterns of sustainable development must be built from the bottom up They focus on methods for movement toward sustainability that can occur at the grassroots level This book presents an integrated series of essays on the policies for sustainable development from one of the leading policy research institutes for environmental and developmental issues It concentrates on the developing world and looks at the specific sectors to which policies must be applied Beginning with a discussion of what constitutes sustainable development it goes on to examine the institutional measures needed to mobilize human resources for change and the economic policies for sustainable natural resource management It then considers the policies needed in agriculture urban development industry forests drylands energy use finance population and consumption The book ends with a discussion of the potential for financing new policy initiatives and the pressing need to reduce population growth and profligate consumption Throughout it demonstrates how those directly involved are best suited to manage their environments and resources Policies for sustainable development depend upon the experience and resourcefulness of local people and require that they control their own futures

Environment & Sustainable Development I. Sundar, 2006 A Survey of Sustainable Development Jonathan Harris, Timothy Wise, Kevin Gallagher, Neva R. Goodwin, 2013-04-16 Perpetual economic growth is physically impossible on a planet with finite resources Many concerned with humanity's future have focused on the concept of sustainable development as an alternative as they seek means of achieving current economic and social goals without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own goals Sustainable development brings together elements of economics public policy sociology ecology resource management and other related areas and while the term has become quite popular it is rarely defined and even less often is it understood A Survey of Sustainable Development addresses that problem by bringing together in a single volume the most important works on sustainable human and economic development It offers a broad overview of the subject and gives the reader a quick and thorough guide to this highly diffuse topic The volume offers ten sections on topics including economic and social dimensions of sustainable development the North South balance population and the demographic transition agriculture and renewable resources energy and materials use globalization and corporate responsibility local and national strategies Each section is introduced with an essay by one of the volume editors that provides an overview of the subject and a summary of the mainstream literature followed by two to three page abstracts of the most important articles or book chapters on the topic A Survey of Sustainable Development is the sixth and final volume in the Frontier Issues of Economic Thought series produced by the Global Development And Environment Institute at Tufts University Each book brings together the most important articles and book chapters in a frontier area of economics where important new work is being done but has not yet been incorporated into the mainstream of economic study The book is an essential reference for students and scholars concerned with economics environmental studies public policy and administration international development and a broad range of related fields

Environmental Science 6e (paper) Daniel D. Chiras,2013      Planning for Sustainability Stephen Wheeler,2013-07-18

How can human communities sustain a long term existence on a small planet This challenge grows ever more urgent as the threat of global warming increases Planning for Sustainability presents a wide ranging intellectually well grounded and accessible introduction to the concept of planning for more sustainable and livable communities The text explores topics such as how more compact and walkable cities and towns might be created how local ecosystems can be restored how social inequalities might be reduced how greenhouse gas emissions might be lowered and how more sustainable forms of economic development can be brought about The second edition has been extensively revised and updated throughout including an improved structure with chapters now organized under three sections the nature of sustainable planning issues central to sustainable planning and scales of sustainable planning New material includes greater discussion of climate change urban food systems the relationships between public health and the urban environment and international development Building on past schools of planning theory Planning for Sustainability lays out a sustainability planning framework that pays special attention to the rapidly evolving institutions and power structures of a globalizing world By considering in turn each scale of planning international national regional municipal neighborhood and site and building the book illustrates how sustainability initiatives at different levels can interrelate Only by weaving together planning initiatives and institutions at different scales and by integrating efforts across disciplines can we move towards long term human and ecological well being      Defining Sustainable Development for Our Common Future Iris Borowy,2013-12-04 The UN World Commission on Environment and Development chaired by former Norwegian Prime Minister Gro Harlem Brundtland alerted the world to the urgency of making progress toward economic development that could be sustained without depleting natural resources or harming the environment Written by an international group of politicians civil servants and experts on the environment and development the Brundtland Report changed sustainable development from a physical notion to one based on social economic and environmental issues This book positions the Brundtland Commission as a key event within a longer series of international reactions to pressing problems of global poverty and environmental degradation It shows that its report Our Common Future published in 1987 covered much more than its definition of sustainable development as development that meets the needs of the present without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs for which it became best known It also addressed a long list of issues which remain unresolved today The book explores how the work of the Commission juggled contradictory expectations and world views which existed within the Commission and beyond and drew on the concept of sustainable development as a way to reconcile profound differences. The result was both an immense success and disappointment. Coining an irresistibly simple definition enabled the Brundtland Commission to place sustainability firmly on the international agenda. This definition gained acceptability for a potentially divisive concept but it also diverted attention from underlying demands for fundamental political and social changes. Meanwhile the central message of the Commission, the need to make inconvenient sustainability considerations a part of global politics as much as of everyday life, has been sidelined. The book thus assesses to what extent the Brundtland Commission represented an immense step forward or a missed opportunity.

Beyond the Biophysical Laura German, Joshua J. Ramisch, Ritu Verma, 2010-06-19. Beyond the Biophysical provides a broad overview of agriculture and natural resource management (NRM) scholarship and practice that lies beyond the biophysical, emphasizing instead epistemological, cultural and political foundations of NRM. The volume is oriented toward professionals with expertise in agriculture and natural resource management scholarship and practice but who lack exposure to the conceptual and methodological underpinnings of critical theory, the anthropology of development, ecological anthropology and other relevant scholarship. It therefore follows common standards of academic rigour but minimizes the use of jargon, integrates detailed case studies with conceptual syntheses and attempts to move from critique to concrete recommendations for scholarship and practice. The volume seeks to foster a more nuanced and responsible engagement with local communities and the natural world among NRM scholars and practitioners.

The Sustainable Urban Development Reader Stephen M. Wheeler, Timothy Beatley, 2004. Bringing together classic readings from a wide variety of sources, this key book investigates how our cities and towns can become more sustainable. Thirty-eight selections span issues such as land use, planning, urban design, transportation, ecological restoration, economic development, resource use and equity planning. Section introductions outline the major themes whilst the editors' introductions to the individual writings explain their interest and significance to wider debates. Additional sections present twenty-four case studies of real-world sustainable urban planning examples, sustainability planning exercises and further reading. Providing background in theory, practical application and vision in a clear, accessible format, The Sustainable Urban Development Reader is an essential resource for students, professionals and indeed anyone interested in the future of urban environments.

Planning for Sustainability Stephen M. Wheeler, 2004-08-19. Existing patterns of urbanization are unsustainable in the long run. Current development practices consume enormous amounts of land and resources, damage local ecosystems, produce pollutants, create huge inequalities between groups of people and undermine local community and quality of life. Unfortunately, planning has itself led to many unsustainable development practices. Planning for Sustainability presents a straightforward, systematic analysis of how more sustainable cities and towns can be brought about. It does so in a highly readable manner that considers in turn each scale of planning: international, national, regional, municipal, neighbourhood, site and building. In the process, it illustrates how sustainability initiatives at these different scales interrelate and how an overall framework can be developed for more livable communities     Sustainable Development Social Organization, Institutional Arrangements and Rural Development Sergio Sepúlveda,1997     Sustainable Tourism Development Anukrati Sharma,2019-08-05 Exploring the importance of destination branding and destination marketing as well as their implications on sustainability in tourism this book approaches the topic through the lens of destination image taking into account the large influence of appearance on tourist attraction With consideration to various stakeholders in sustainable tourism development this book incorporates ideas for new techniques in destination branding and marketing in order to maximize economic impact The book also discusses the rising influence of social media on tourists interest Emphasizing sustainability in tourism development the chapters address a number of important issues such as post disaster tourism marketing culture and heritage tourism eco tourism community based nature tourism community involvement in destination development benchmarking for destination performance evaluation sustainable food practices in tourism and more Each chapter of this book incorporates a quantifiable trend in tourism development including various paradigms and studies that relay different statistics about certain areas of tourism The book makes use of case studies for specific destinations and integrates strategies evidence and analyses to offer a holistic understanding of the myriad factors involved in sustainable tourism development     North American Test of Criteria and Indicators of Sustainable Forestry Stephen Jerome Woodley,2000     The Global Greenhouse Regime Kirk R. Smith,2013-12-16 Effective policies to prevent global warming and climatic change are urgently required by the world community However international negotiations on this issue repeatedly come up against the problems of allocating responsibility for the greenhouse effect and bearing the costs of remedying the situation This volume offers a multidisciplinary response to the challenge It presents the scientific economic and political issues and goes on to describe the policy options available The different ways of determining responsibility for greenhouse gases and calculating obligations to pay for hazards to the environment are analyzed The contributors examine the implications for various countries while a concluding chapter explores climatic change negotiations what is at stake and for whom
