Mark Twain's Correspondence With Henry Huttleston Rogers 1893-1909:

Mark Twain's Correspondence with Henry Huttleston Rogers, 1893-1909 Mark Twain, 1969-04-01 This collection of correspondence between Clemens and Rogers may be thought of as a continuation of Mark Twain's Letters to His Publishers 1867-1894 edited by Hamlin Hill. It completes the story begun there of Samuel Clemens's business affairs especially insofar as they concern dealings with publishers and it documents Clemens's progress from financial disaster with the Paige typesetter and Webster Company to renewed prosperity under the steady skillful hand of H. H. Rogers. But Clemens's correspondence with Rogers reveals more than a business relationship. It illuminates a friendship which Clemens came to value above all others and it suggests a profound change in his patterns of living. He who during the Hartford years had been a devoted family man content with a discrete circle of intimates now became again as he had been during the Nevada and California years a man among sporting men enjoying prizefights and professional billiard matches in public and in private long days of poker, gruff jest and good Scotch whisky aboard Rogers's magnificent yacht.

The letters capture Twain's reflections on human nature, literature, and society, showcasing not only his signature humor but also his profound philosophical musings. Readers will encounter his thoughts on the absurdity of societal norms, the value of literary contributions, and the personal struggles he faced following the death of his daughter Jean.
