Postwar History Education in Japan and the Germanys Julian Dierkes, 2010-12-14 How did East and West Germany and Japan reconstitute national identity after World War II Did all three experience parallel reactions to national trauma and reconstruction History education shaped how these nations reconceived their national identities Because the content of history education was controlled by different actors history education materials framed national identity in very different ways In Japan where the curriculum was controlled by bureaucrats bent on maintaining their purported neutrality materials focused on the empirical building blocks of history who where what at the expense of discussions of historical responsibility In East Germany where party cadres controlled the curriculum students were taught that World War II was a capitalist aberration In West Germany where teachers controlled the curriculum students were taught the lessons of shame and then regeneration after historians turned away from grand national narratives This book shows that constructions of national identity are not easily malleable on the basis of moral and political concerns only but that they are subject to institutional constraints and opportunities In an age when post conflict reconstruction and reconciliation has become a major focus of international policies the analysis offers important implications for the parallel revision of portrayals of national history and the institutional reconstruction of policy making regimes

The Nation, Europe, and the World Hanna Schissler, Yasemin Nuhoglu Soysal, 2005-04-01 Textbooks in history geography and the social sciences provide important insights into the ways in which nation states project themselves Based on case studies of France Germany the Netherlands Spain Greece Turkey Bulgaria Russia and the United States this volume shows the role that concepts of space and time play in the narration of our country and the wider world in which it is located It explores ways in which in western European countries the nation is reinterpreted through European lenses to replace national approaches in the writing of history On the other hand in an effort to overcome Eurocentric views world history has gained prominence in the United States Yet again East European countries coming recently out of a transnational political union have their own issues with the concept of nation to contend with These recent developments in the field of Learning Democracy Brian Puaca, 2009-07-01 Scholarship on the history of West Germany s educational system has traditionally portrayed the postwar period of Allied occupation as a failure and the following decades as a time of pedagogical stagnation Two decades after World War II however the Federal Republic had become a stable democracy a member of NATO and a close ally of the West Had the schools really failed to contribute to this remarkable transformation of German society and political culture This study persuasively argues that long before the protest movements of the late 1960s the West German educational system was undergoing meaningful reform from within Although politicians and intellectual elites paid little attention to education after 1945 administrators teachers and pupils initiated significant changes in schools at the local level The work of these actors resulted in an array of democratic reforms that signaled a departure from the authoritarian and nationalistic legacies of the past The establishment of exchange programs between the United States and West Germany the formation of student government organizations and student newspapers the publication of revised history and civics textbooks the expansion of teacher training programs and the creation of a Social Studies curriculum all contributed to the advent of a new German educational system following World War II The subtle incremental reforms inaugurated during the first two postwar decades prepared a new generation of young Germans for their responsibilities as citizens of a democratic state Die Reise in die Vergangenheit 5 / 6.
