Theory

The issues of the relationship between theoretical grounds and practical validity of every science attract the attention of numerous scholars, including Parson, Jordan, Sheldon, and many others. The major idea of their theories coincides in the point that the relation between the theoretical and practical parts of the science they deal with, i. e. social work, should allow for people's use of the findings of the science for actual benefit. From the point of view of human development theory, Id deals with this issue as a wish to theorize and "scientize" (Parson, Some Thoughts On The Relationship Between Theory And Practice In And For Social Work, 450) everything, while Ego seeks for the personal use of social work and Superego deals with social benefit and overall access to it.

Thus, no obvious or hidden weak points of these theories can be observed. On the contrary, such an approach discloses only strengths thereof, among which the straight direction to public use of science, making its use easier for non-specialists, and making social work from a mere consulting or looking after a person into a means of actual help to this or that man or woman. This is of special importance in concern of MICA substances abuse people, as their issues demand practical and urgent help, but it should be based on adequate and accurate theoretical data.

Application

The application of literature on the issues of basic features of social work as a discipline and as a science is rather wide. First of all, the literature is dedicated to the topic of drawing boundaries between the theoretical science and practical usefulness of this very science of social work. This very area of application of the scholarly literature on the topic is of paramount importance as it distinguishes the lines between the area of interest for scholars and professionals only and a wide range of users of the social work services. Thus, ordinary people can access social work and make use of it in difficult

Social Work Theory and Ethics Dorothee Hölscher, Richard Hugman, Donna McAuliffe, 2023-03-17 This reference work addresses the ideas that shape social work Much of the social work literature addresses questions of theory and ethics separately so that the body of thought that is represented in social work scholarship and research creates a distinction between them. However, the differences between these categories of thought can be somewhat arbitrary. This volume goes beyond this simple separation of categories. Although it recognises that questions of theory and ethics may be addressed distinctly, the connections between them can be made evident and drawn out by analysing them alongside each other. Social work's use and development of theory can be understood in two complementary ways. First, theory from the social sciences and other disciplines can be applied for social work. Second, considered systematic examinations of practice have enabled theory to be developed out of social work. These different approaches are usually referred to as theory for practice and practice theory. The advancement of social work theory occurs often through the interplay between these two dimensions through research and scholarship in the field. Similarly, social work ethics draw on principles and concepts that have their roots in philosophical inquiry and also involve applied analysis in the particular issues with which social workers engage and their practices in doing so. In this way, social work contributes to wider debates through advancement of its own perspectives and knowledge gained through practice. Social Work Theory and Ethics: Ideas in Practice offers a unique approach by bringing together the complementary dimensions of theory with each other and at the same time with ethical research and scholarship. It presents an analysis of the ideas of social work in a way that enables connections between them to be identified and explored. This reference is essential reading for social work practitioners, researchers, policy makers, academics, and students, as well as an invaluable resource for universities, research institutes, government ministries and departments, major non-governmental organisations, and professional associations of social work.
