Resources of the City Bill Luckin, 2017-03-02 The field of urban environmental history is a relatively new one yet it is rapidly moving to the forefront of scholarly research and is the focus of much interdisciplinary work Given the environmental problems facing the modern world it is perhaps unsurprising that historians geographers political natural and social scientists should increasingly look at the environmental problems faced by previous generations and how they were regarded and responded to This volume reflects this growing concern and reflects many of the key concerns and issues that are essential to our understanding of the problems faced by cities in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries Addressing a variety of environmental issues such as clean water supply the provision retention of green space and noise pollution that faced European and North American cities the essays in this volume highlight the common responses as well as the differences that characterised the reactions to these trans national concerns
