Newberg,1989 Communication, Commerce and Power Edward A. Comor,2016-01-06 In this history of US based direct broadcast satellite developments the United States and other nation states are shown to be the ultimate arbiters of their ongoing histories In making this now unfashionable argument Edward A Comor directly challenges recent academic work that tends to privilege global processes over national and argues that the contemporary world order is being shaped primarily by transnational rather than nation state based forces In testing this orientation with empirical research on US foreign communication policy since 1960 Communication Commerce and Power compels academics and policy makers to rethink commonplace assumptions about the characteristics and potentials of the contemporary and future international political economy Quality and Reliability of Telecommunications Infrastructure William H. Lehr,2013-12-16 In the last decade the technology regulation and industry structure of our information infrastructure telephone services cable and broadcast television and myriad new data and information services have changed dramatically Since the break up of AT T s Bell System monopoly telephone services in the United States are no longer purchased from a single firm Advances in fiber optics wireless communications and software controlled switching are changing how communication services are provided As the global economy grows more dependent on a hybrid mix of interconnected networks public officials in the US and abroad are relinquishing control of the market All of these changes are affecting the quality and reliability of the telecommunications infrastructure but informed discussions of the public policy and economic issues are scarce Deregulation and increased competition have lowered prices but have service quality and reliability suffered Do advanced network technologies which make it possible to offer a dizzying array of new services increase vulnerability to system wide failures Who should or is likely to bear the costs of increased or decreased service quality This volume tackles the economic and public policy issues raised by these difficult questions for an audience of industry executives scholars and policymakers Leading scholars and analysts examine such issues as the effects of network ownership on incentives to invest in quality improvements and or strategies for quality differentiated pricing in tomorrow s broadband integrated networks They analyze the quality of current telecommunications networks and the impact of re regulation on cable television quality The contributions range from new microeconomic theory to new empirical research As such the volume makes a valuable contribution to the public debate on network quality and reliability It will be useful both as an introduction to newcomers and as a resource for more experienced researchers As regulatory industry and national barriers to integrated communications fall these issues are likely to become even more important The research presented here provides a solid foundation for further discussion The Froehlich/Kent Encyclopedia of Telecommunications Fritz E.
