New Frontiers In Food Microstructure:

New Frontiers in Food Microstructure Donald B. Bechtel, 1983 Microstructural Principles of Food Processing and Engineering José Miguel Aguilera, David W. Stanley, 1999-09-30 An Aspen Food Engineering Series Book This new edition provides a comprehensive reference on food microstructure emphasizing its interdisciplinary nature rooted in the scientific principles of food materials science and physical chemistry The book details the techniques available to study food microstructure examines the microstructure of basic food components and its relation to quality and explores how microstructure is affected by specific unit operations in food process engineering Descriptions of a number of food related applications provide a better understanding of the complexities of the microstructural approach to food processing Color plates

Food Microstructure, 1988 New Techniques in the Analysis of Foods Michael H. Tunick, Samuel A. Palumbo, Pina M. Fratamico, 2013-06-29 The contributions in this volume were first presented at a symposium organized by the editors and held at the 214th National Meeting of the American Chemical Society in Las Vegas in September 1997 The symposium was sponsored by the ACS Division of Agricultural and Food Chemistry and covered recent developments of interest in food analysis Many changes have occurred since the standard textbooks on food analysis were published E coli 0157 H7 has leaped into prominence requiring new and rapid methods of detection MALDI MS was developed and used in food analysis for the first time electron microscopy fluorescence spectroscopy and electrorheology have been applied to cheese bread meat and chocolate new methods for monitoring and predicting shelf life have been introduced new techniques for determining the composition of food have evolved This book includes many emerging approaches which food scientists may find useful and probably will not find in a textbook The editors thank the authors whose work is presented in these chapters the Division of Agricultural and Food Chemistry for agreeing to hold the symposium and our editors at Kluwer Academic Plenum Publishers whose assistance made our task easier Michael H Tunick Samuel A Palumbo Pina M Fratamico

Food Structure J. M. V. Blanshard, J. R. Mitchell, 2016-07-29 Food Structure Its Creation and Evaluation reviews research and major developments with regard to the role of ingredients in building food structures Emphasis is on homogeneous and heterogeneous multicomponent systems their molecular interactions the macroscopic physics of their mechanical properties and the variety of techniques and strategies necessary to evaluate their properties if they are to be acceptable to the consumer This book is comprised of 26 chapters and begins by discussing the relevance of food structure from a dental clinical perspective The next chapter describes a hierarchy of gel structures that may be used to model the complex molecular networks formed by the protein and or polysaccharide components within the food system including simple single component networks binary networks or mixed gels and composite or filled gels The reader is then introduced to the gel structure of food biopolymers the structure and stability of emulsions the polymer water relationship and its importance for food structure and the fracture properties of polymers Dry spinning of milk proteins is also considered along with structured fat and sugar systems food crispness and texture This monograph will be of interest to food scientists sensory scientists nutritionists rheologists physicists and chemists Handbook of Food Science, Technology, and Engineering - 4 Volume Set Y. H. Hui, Frank Sherkat, 2005-12-19

Advances in food science technology and engineering are occurring at such a rapid rate that obtaining current detailed information is challenging at best While almost everyone engaged in these disciplines has accumulated a vast variety of data over time an organized comprehensive resource containing this data would be invaluable to have The Food Texture Moskowitz, 2017-11-22 Food Texture is the first book to provide a broad overview of texture measurement from both the subjective consumer and objective instrument points of view and to highlight the relation between objective measures and sensory perceptions The book's logical presentation opens with coverage of rheology and microstructure analysis proceeds to psychophysics and then moves on to product testing and optimization Featuring contributions by many of the foremost authorities in the field Food Texture includes detailed case histories that offer insight on specific basic and applied research problems It also comprehensively covers the latest methods for subjective evaluation of texture texture physics and psychophysics and texture optimization giving a treatment of subjective measurement that is available nowhere else in the literature in such a convenient form Comprising the most authoritative account of its topic to date Food Texture will prove an invaluable reference for food scientists and technologists chemists biochemists organic and analytical chemists nutritionists and microbiologists concerned with sensory evaluation graduate students of food science and food engineering and in house training programs and professional seminars

Chemical and Functional Properties of Food Proteins Zdzislaw E. Sikorski, 2001-06-22 Chemical and Functional Properties of Food Proteins presents the current state of knowledge on the content of proteins in food structures the chemical functional and nutritive properties of food proteins the chemical and biochemical modification of proteins in foods during storage and processing and the mutagenicity and carcinogenicity of nitrogenous compounds It emphasizes the structure function relationship as well as the effects of practical conditions applied in food processing on the biochemical and chemical reactions in food proteins and food product quality The first ten chapters discuss structure function relationships methods of analysis of nitrogenous compounds chemical and enzymatic modifications nutritive roles and mutagenicity and carcinogenicity of food proteins The following six chapters describe the proteins of meat and fish milk eggs cereals legumes oilseeds and single cell organisms and present detailed information on the effects of conditions applied in storage and processing on the reactions in proteins and their impact on quality attributes of food products Characterization of Food Anilkumar G. Gaonkar, 1995-09-27 Rapid and continued developments in electronics optics computing instrumentation spectroscopy and other branches of science and technology resulted in considerable improvements in various methodologies

Due to this revolution in methodology it is now possible to solve problems which were previously considered difficult to solve. These new methods have led to a better characterization and understanding of foods. The aim of this book is to assemble for handy reference various emerging state of the art methodologies used for characterizing foods. Although the emphasis is on real foods, model food systems are also considered. Methods pertaining to interfaces, food emulsions, foams, and dispersions, fluorescence, ultrasonics, nuclear magnetic resonance, electron spin resonance, Fourier transform infrared, and near infrared spectroscopy, small angle neutron scattering, dielectrics, microscopy, rheology, sensors, antibodies, flavor, and aroma analysis are included. This book is an indispensable reference source for scientists, engineers, and technologists in industries, universities, and government laboratories who are involved in food research and/or development, and also for faculty, advanced undergraduate, graduate, and postgraduate students from Food Science, Food Engineering, and Biochemistry departments. In addition, it will serve as a valuable reference for analytical chemists and surface and colloid scientists. List of Publications North Central Forest Experiment Station (Saint Paul, Minn.), 1983
