

Public Policy Evaluation

- Policy evaluation assesses the effectiveness of a public policy in terms of its perceived intentions and results. It is a reactive experience.
- Lawrence Mohr write essence of evaluation as “what did happen after implementing the program with what would have happened had the program not been implemented”.
- Evaluation exercise can bring policy issue back into decision making arena.
- Without policy evaluation both the credibility of the policy and the accountability of those individuals and institutions responsible for its development remain uncertain.
