Governance Reform Under Real-World Conditions Sina Odugbemi, Thomas Jacobson, 2008-06-13 Although necessary and often first rate technocratic solutions alone have been ineffective in delivering real change or lasting results in governance reforms This is primarily because reform programs are delivered not in controlled environments but under complex diverse sociopolitical and economic conditions Real world conditions In political societies ownership of reform programs by the entire country cannot be assumed public opinion will not necessarily be benign and coalitions of support may be scarce or nonexistent even when intended reforms really will benefit those who need them most While the development community has the technical tools to address governance challenges experience shows that technical solutions are often insufficient Difficulties arise when attempts are made to apply what are often excellent technical solutions Human beings either acting alone or in groups small and large are not as amenable as are pure numbers and they cannot be ignored In the real world reforms will not succeed and they will certainly not be sustained without the correct alignment of citizens stakeholders and voice Governance Reform under Real World Conditions Citizens Stakeholders and Voice is a contribution to efforts to improve governance systems around the world particularly in developing countries The contributors who are academics and development practitioners provide a range of theoretical frameworks and innovative approaches and techniques for dealing with the most important nontechnical or adaptive challenges that impede the success and sustainability of reform efforts The editors and contributors hope that this book will be a useful guide for governments think tanks civil society organizations and development agencies working to improve the ways in which governance reforms are implemented around the world
