Phillips,1993-05-15 Canada and the Global Economy John N. H. Britton,1996 An analysis of geographic trends in the Canadian economy studying patterns of development consumption shifts in employment and the locational behavior of industries The 24 essays written by Canadian economic geographers explore themes in regards to the openness of the Canadian economy its simple economic geography in regional variation of resources and urban development its rapid advances in technology and the role of government in national and international markets Canadian card order number C96 900023 5 Annotation copyright by Book News Inc Portland OR Asleep at the Switch Bruce Smardon,2014-11-01 Since 1960 Canadian industry has lagged behind other advanced capitalist economies in its level of commitment to research and development Asleep at the Switch explains the reasons for this underperformance despite a series of federal measures to spur technological innovation in Canada Bruce Smardon argues that the underlying issue in Canada's longstanding failure to innovate is structural and can be traced to the rapid diffusion of American Fordist practices into the manufacturing sector of the early twentieth century Under the influence of Fordism Canadian industry came to depend heavily on outside sources of new technology particularly from the United States Though this initially brought in substantial foreign capital and led to rapid economic development the resulting branch plant industrial structure led to the prioritization of business interests over transformative and innovative industrial strategies This situation was exacerbated in the early 1960s by the Glassco framework which assumed that the best way for the federal state to foster domestic technological capacity was to fund private sector research and collaborative strategies with private capital Remarkably and with few results federal programs and measures continued to emphasize a market oriented approach Asleep at the Switch details the ongoing attempts by the federal government to increase the level of innovation in Canadian industry but shows why these efforts have failed to alter the pattern of technological dependency The Political Economy of North American Free Trade Ricardo Grinspun,Maxwell A. Cameron,1993-06-18 Analyzes the economic social political and environmental implications of NAFTA from a range of critical perspectives The chapters unified by a sceptical view of the management of economic integration in North America cover the economic strategy of Mexico Canada US trade agreement and more

Degrees of Freedom Keith G. Banting, George Hoberg, Richard Simeon, 1997 A comparative study of Canadian and American responses to the changing international economy and to changing patterns of social diversity in domestic society Degrees of Freedom traces the impact of these pressures on the economic and social structure culture political institutions and policy regimes of the two countries

Competitiveness In International Food Markets Maurey E Bredahl, 2019-08-19 The successful completion of the GATT negotiations and the North American Free Trade Agreement and the completion of the EC Internal Market mean that food and agricultural sectors must become internationally competitive Firms farm organizations and governments are seeking to identify strategies and public policies that will increase their compet

Continentalizing Canadian Telecommunications Vanda Rideout, 2003-01-30 Rideout focuses on the protection of the public interest a crucial element neglected by most recent studies and shows that although alliances have been formed between labour consumers and public interest activists significant disagreements over issues such as free trade long distance and local competition and a targeted subsidy program for very low income Canadians have meant that this united front has not been able to counter the forces of the new neo liberal telecommunication policy regime Continentalizing Canadian Telecommunications details the complex relationships between the various corporate and government interests shows how the changes they brought about have locked Canada's telecommunications system into the orbit of the US system and discusses the implications this has for Canadians

Productivity, Competitiveness, Trade Performance and Real Income James R. Markusen, Economic Council of Canada, Canada Communication Group. Publishing, 1992 The purpose of this study is to analyze the interrelationships among four key economic concepts and examines the determinants of the relationships among them It considers the interrelationships among these concepts from both theoretical and empirical perspectives and their implications as they relate to public policy It provides general definitions along with brief discussions It also provides a review and non technical summary of the study and a statement published in 1992 by the Economic Council of Canada
