The Social and Interpersonal Origins of Depression Today Jeremy Clarke, Paul Cundy, Jessica Yakeley, 2020-06-29 Originally published as a special issue of Psychoanalytic Psychotherapy this collection was timed to coincide with the publication of the new NICE guideline for the treatment of depression which will shape the context of NHS talking therapy services for the next decade In 2005 Professor Lord Layard demonstrated for the first time that mental health should matter to the UK Treasury Layard showed that the cost of untreated depression was huge due to welfare spending on invalidity benefits and that this was a social problem rising across the OECD but more so in the UK NICE had already published a clinical guideline recommending several talking therapies that were cost effective Why could no one still get them In 2007 under New Labour the world's first universal free at the point of need service was launched to remedy this IAPT Improving Access to Psychological Therapies Thus began a race against depression predicted by the World Health Organisation to become the leading cause of disability worldwide by 2020 But on the eve of NICE's new guideline for depression due in 2021 it is now clear that across large parts of the UK we are set to lose this race Badly Why What went wrong Clarke Cundy and Yakeley have brought together a group of researchers and experts in this collection who address some of the fundamental flaws in the policy design for IAPT By drawing attention to neglected social and interpersonal origins of depression pointing us towards more effective approaches and seeking to pinpoint some of the gaps in thinking during IAPT's first decade this book offers alternative answers to what still remains Britain's biggest social problem
