

The Lymphatic System

Lymph and lymph vessels

Lymph is a clear, colorless fluid that circulates through the lymphatic system. It is composed of white blood cells, antibodies, and other substances that help fight infection and disease. Lymph vessels are thin-walled tubes that carry lymph throughout the body. They are found in almost all tissues and organs, and they connect to the venous system at the neck.

Lymph nodes

Lymph nodes are small, bean-shaped organs that are part of the lymphatic system. They are found throughout the body, and they filter lymph for infection and disease. Lymph nodes are also sites where immune cells, such as T cells and B cells, interact and coordinate the immune response.

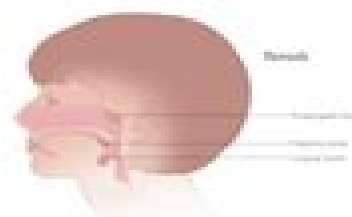

Inflammatory and immune responses

The lymphatic system plays a key role in the body's inflammatory and immune responses. It helps to transport immune cells to the site of infection or injury, and it helps to remove debris and waste from the affected area. Lymph nodes are also sites where immune cells interact and coordinate the immune response. Inflammation is a natural response to injury or infection, and it helps to protect the body from further damage. The immune system is the body's defense against disease, and it helps to keep the body healthy and free from infection.

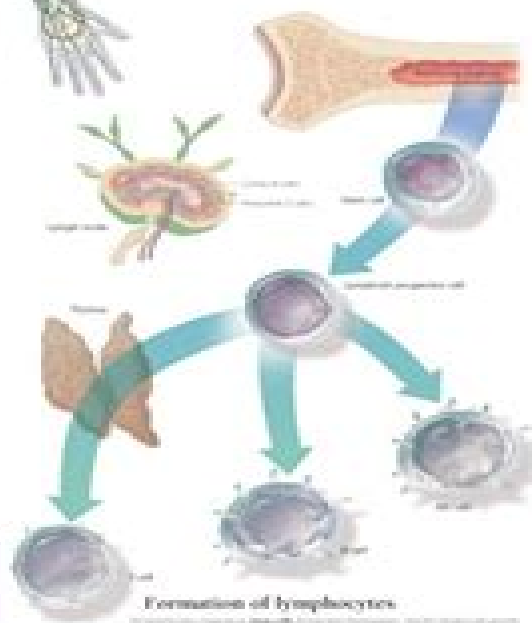

What is the lymphatic system?

The lymphatic system is a network of vessels and organs that help to transport lymph throughout the body. It is composed of lymph vessels, lymph nodes, and lymphoid organs, such as the spleen and thymus. The lymphatic system plays a key role in the body's inflammatory and immune responses, and it helps to keep the body healthy and free from infection.

Lymphoid intestinal tissue

Lymphoid intestinal tissue is a type of lymphoid tissue that is found in the lining of the small intestine. It is composed of lymphocytes, which are white blood cells that help to fight infection and disease. Lymphoid intestinal tissue plays a key role in the body's immune response to food and environmental antigens.

Formation of lymphocytes

Lymphocytes are a type of white blood cell that are part of the immune system. They are formed in the bone marrow from hematopoietic stem cells. Lymphocytes play a key role in the body's immune response to infection and disease. There are three main types of lymphocytes: T cells, B cells, and natural killer cells. Each type of lymphocyte has a specific function in the immune response.
