Bearing Arms for His Majesty Ben Vinson, 2001

This study uses the participation of free colored men whether mulattos pardos or morenos i.e. Afro Spaniards Afro Indians or pure blacks in New Spain's militias as a prism for examining race relations racial identity racial categorization and issues of social mobility for racially stigmatized groups in colonial Mexico By 1793 nearly 10 percent of New Spain's population was made up of people who could trace some African ancestry people subject to more legal disabilities and social discrimination than mestizos who in turn fell below white creoles who in turn fell below the Spanish born in the stratified and caste like society of colonial Spanish America The originality of this study lies in approaching race via a single important institution the military rather than via abstractions or examples taken from particular regions or single runs of legal documents By exploring the lives of tens of thousands of part time and full time free colored soldiers who served the colony as volunteers or conscripts and by adopting a multi regional approach the author is able not only to show how military institutions evolved with reference to race and vice versa but to do so in a manner that reveals discontinuities and regional differences as well as historical trends He also is able to examine black lives beyond the institution of slavery and to achieve a more nuanced impression of the meaning of freedom in colonial times From the 1550s on free colored forces figured prominently in the colony's military forces and units of free colored soldiers evolved with increasing autonomy in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries The author concludes however that the Bourbon reforms of the 1760s which clearly expanded the military establishment and the role of Spanish soldiers born in the New World came at the expense of free colored companies which experienced a reduction in both numbers and institutional privileges
