Improving Outcomes for Children and Families Anita Lightburn, Cinzia Canali, Jane Aldgate, Tony Maluccio, Tiziano Vecchiato, Wendy Rose, 2011-03-15. This edited collection offers an international perspective on the challenges of designing and undertaking outcome based evaluation of child and family services. It introduces the key ideas and issues currently being debated in the evaluation of these services and provides examples of evaluation from policy and practice. Understanding Family Support John Pinkerton, Pat Dolan, John Canavan, 2016-04-21. Understanding Family Support provides a definition of family support and a clear perspective on the role that it has in promoting the welfare of children and their families. Family support is a concept that has been used in a range of ways to describe various aspects of child welfare policy and practice. The authors argue that this weakens family support as an overarching child welfare paradigm. They present a unifying definition of family support along with ten principles and a series of reflective practice questions applicable to legislation and policy, organisation, management and planning, direct work with children and families and research and evaluation. This is an important resource for any professional engaged in policy development, service design, delivering or evaluation of family support including social workers, residential care staff, community development workers, teachers, community police, human services managers, evaluators and policy makers. Better Law for a Better World Liz Curran, 2021-04-19. How as a society can we find ways of ensuring the people who are the most vulnerable or have little voice can avail themselves of the protection in law to improve their social, cultural, health and economic outcomes as befits civilised society? Better Law for a Better World answers this question by looking at innovative practices and developments emerging within law, practice and education and shares the skills and techniques that could lead to confidence in the law and its ability to respond. Using recent research from Australia, practice initiatives and information, the book breaks down ways for law students, legal educators and law practitioners including judicial officers, law administrators, legislators and policy makers to enhance access to justice and improve outcomes through new approaches to lawyering. These can include Multi Disciplinary Practice including health justice partnerships integrated justice practice restorative practice empowerment modes community client centred approaches and collaborative interdisciplinary practice informed by practical experience The book contains critical information on what such practice might look like and the elements that will be required in the development of the essential skills and criteria for such practice It seeks to open up a dialogue about how we can make the law better This includes making the community more central to the operation of the law and improving client centred practice so that the Rule of Law can deliver on its claims to serve protect and ensure equality before the law It explores practical ways that emerging lawyers can be trained differently to ensure improved communication collaboration problem solving partnership and interpersonal skills The book explores the challenges of such work It also gives suggestions on how to reduce professional barriers and variations in practice to effectively humanely and efficiently make a difference in people s lives The book builds essential skills and new approaches to lawyering for law students legal educators new lawyers and seasoned lawyers judicial members and law administrators to equip them to better respond to community need It looks at the law in context by also exploring the role of the law in improving the social determinants of health and socially just outcomes

The Routledge Handbook of Service User Involvement in Human Services Research and Education Hugh McLaughlin,Peter Beresford,Colin Cameron,Helen Casey,Joe Duffy,2020-08-10

Worldwide there has been a growth in service user involvement in education and research in recent years This handbook is the first book which identifies what is happening in different regions of the world to provide different countries and client groups with the opportunity to learn from each other The book is divided into five sections Section One examines service user involvement in context exploring theoretical issues which underpin service user involvement In Section Two we focus on the state of service user involvement in human services education and research across the globe including examples of innovative practice but also identifying examples of where it is not happening and why Section Three offers more detailed examination of such involvement in a wide range of professional education learning settings Section Four focuses on the involvement of service users in research involving a wide range of service user groups and situations Lastly Section Five explores future challenges for education and research to ensure involvement remains meaningful The book includes forty eight chapters including seventeen case studies from all regions of the world this is the first book to both highlight the subject's methodological and theoretical issues and give practical examples in education and research for those wishing to engage in this field. It will be of interest to all service users, scholars and students of social work, nursing, occupational therapy and other human service subjects.

Co-creating and Co-producing Research Evidence

Dorothy Newbury-Birch, Keith Allan, 2019-08-05. The importance of a strong evidence base is widely recognised in contemporary health, social care and education practice, meaning that there is a real need for research which can be quickly and easily translated into real world situations. Research co-produced by practitioners and academics from early stages to end results can draw on each party's knowledge and experience in order to create high quality evidence that is relevant and appropriate to practice needs. This guide introduces the basics of co-producing research, looking at the evidence for co-produced research and outlining its theoretical underpinnings, as well as discussing barriers and facilitators to consider. It includes a practitioner perspective and an academic perspective on the benefits and challenges of co-produced research. The substantive chapters are each co-written by an academic and practitioner team and give examples of work carried out and lessons learned in public health, education and criminal justice settings. Key learning points are included throughout and drawn together to comprise a toolkit at the end of the book. This book teaches academics and practitioners more about how they can find practical evidence-based answers to complex questions.

Creating Change for Complex Children and their Families

Marion Polichroniadis, Jo Holmes, Amelia Oldfield, 2011-08-15. Using detailed case studies, this book focuses on the needs of children with a range of behavioural difficulties and explores their complicated interactions. The book examines how to integrate multi-disciplinary interventions and how to use the powerful relationships that develop to enable families to achieve positive lasting changes.

Advanced Methods in Family Therapy Research

Richard B Miller, Lee N. Johnson, 2013-12-17. Research is vital in moving the field of family therapy forward, but the myriad of possibilities inherent in working with systems and individuals can overwhelm even the most seasoned researcher. Advanced Methods in Family Therapy Research is the best resource to address the day-to-day questions that researchers have as they investigate couples and families and the best source for learning long-term theory and methodology. The contributors of this volume share their wisdom on a wide variety of topics including validity concerns, measuring interpersonal process and relational change, dyadic data analysis demonstrated through a sample research study, mixed methods studies and recruitment and retention. The volume contains one of the most detailed descriptions of data collections and covers interviewing using questionnaires and observing brain activity. Also addressed are suggestions to meaningfully reduce cultural bias to conduct ethical research and in the Health Services Research chapter to examine interventions for clients in various income brackets. A separate groundbreaking chapter also addresses psychophysiological research in a couple and family therapeutic context. As an added benefit, readers will learn how to become informed consumers of journal articles and studies, how to produce quality publishable research and how to write fundable grant proposals. Each chapter provides a clear and detailed guide for students.

researchers and professionals and as a whole Advanced Methods in Family Therapy Research advances the field by teaching readers how to provide evidence that marriage and family therapy not only relieves symptoms but also effects behavioral change in all family members
