Making Of The English Landscape:

Malleson,2019-04-19 Located some one hundred kilometers southwest of Cairo the Fayum region has long been regarded as unique often described in terms that conjure up images of an idealized Garden of Eden In An Egyptian Landscape Claire Malleson takes a novel approach to the study of the region by exploring the ways in which people have through millennia perceived and engaged with the Fayum landscape Distinguishing between the experienced landscape of state and bureaucratic record and the imagined landscape of myth meaning and observers personal influences and expectations Malleson questions in detail where those perceptions come from She traces religious practices follows the tracks of myths and traditions and investigates the roots of stories found in texts from the pharaonic classical and Medieval Islamic periods She also reviews many more recent travel writings on the region from the seventeenth to the nineteenth centuries The work of each author is presented in its historical and cultural context and Malleson integrates what is known about ancient activities in the Fayum based on the archaeological evidence from the many monuments and ancient settlements that exist in the region. Scholars and students of archaeology and landscape studies as well as general readers interested in Egypt's history and archaeology will find this book highly engaging and enlightening.

English Landscapes and Identities Chris Gosden, Chris Green, Anwen Cooper, Miranda Creswell, Victoria Donnelly, Tyler Franconi, Roger Glyde, Zena Kamash, Sarah Mallet, Laura Morley, Daniel Stansbie, Letty ten Harkel, 2021-05-06

Long before the Norman Conquest of 1066 England saw periods of profound change that transformed the landscape and the identities of those who occupied it. The Bronze and Iron Ages saw the introduction of now familiar animals and plants such as sheep, horses, wheat and oats as well as new forms of production and exchange and the first laying out of substantial fields and trackways which continued into the earliest Romano-British landscapes. The Anglo-Saxon period saw the creation of new villages based around church and manor with ridge and furrow cultivation strips still preserved today. The basis for this volume is The English Landscapes and Identities project which synthesised all the major available sources of information on English archaeology to examine this crucial period of landscape history from the middle Bronze Age c. 1500 BC to the Domesday survey c. 1086 AD. It looks at the nature of archaeological work undertaken across England to assess its strengths and weaknesses when writing long-term histories. Among many other topics it examines the interaction of ecology and human action in shaping the landscape, issues of movement across the landscape in various periods, changing forms of food over time, an understanding of spatial scale and questions of enclosing and naming the landscape, culminating in a discussion of the links between landscape and identity. The result is the first comprehensive account of the English landscape over a crucial 2500-year period. It also offers a celebration of many centuries of archaeological work, especially the intensive large-scale investigations that have taken place since the 1960s and transformed our understanding of England's past.

The Medieval English Landscape, 1000-1540 Graeme J. White, 2012-09-06

The landscape of medieval England was the product of a multitude of hands. While the power to shape the landscape inevitably lay with the Crown, the nobility and the religious houses, this study also highlights the contribution of the peasantry in the layout of rural settlements and ridge and furrow field works and the funding of parish churches by ordinary townsfolk. The importance of population trends is emphasised as a major factor in shaping the medieval landscape, the rising curve of the eleventh to thirteenth centuries imposing growing pressures on resources and the devastating impact of the Black Death leading to radical decline in the fourteenth century. Opening with a broad-ranging analysis of political and economic trends in medieval England, the book progresses thematically to assess the impact of farming, rural settlement, towns, the Church and fortification, using many original case studies. The concluding chapter charts the end of the medieval landscape with the dissolution of the monasteries, the replacement of castles by country houses, the ongoing enclosure of fields and the growth of towns.

Interpreting the Landscape Michael Aston, 2002-09-11
