District Memoir F. S. Growse,2024-11-20 The Indian Civil Service community of the nineteenth century produced giants in various fields of research and publication Among the well known personalities who come to mind are Sir George Grierson F S Growse and Vincent Smith to name a few The significance of their research lies in the fact that they worked with great sympathy and love and that despite this their work never lost its basic objectivity Great progress in research was made later on but these inspiring writings form a firm basis of all subsequent researches in their respective fields In this book on Mathura F S Growse discusses the religious movements caste system social institutions languages including the dialectal details the history and legends the monuments and even the local luminaries of the place His work shows precision and depth and is ample evidence of his deep and continuous research of the Indian people and their culture Mathura being the heart of India because of its geographical position and its chequered history reflected the cross currents of Indian cultures its art architecture and its rich literature Growse found here an ample field to satisfy his quest for knowledge The erudition which Growse wielded is evident by the depth to which he went in deciphering the inscriptions in checking the dates of the events of the ancient and medieval periods and in substantiating his statements by copiously quoting from Sanskrit and Vrajabhasha texts His findings in the development of the Mathura School of Sculpture are the first serious attempt to classify the available material in that field The Memoir also clearly establishes the existence of a distinct Mathura School of Architecture In short it covers the history of the area from the ancient Buddhist period to the medieval Hindu period in minute detail Mathura a District Memoir, 2020 Mathura R.
