

angles. This helps your overall development because, in many other poses, you're just flexing your triceps to flex your back. You're not using a lot of shoulder strength.

Therefore, right from the beginning, I discovered that your triceps were the key to the Classic and there, there's a weight limit, and I had to make adjustments. I started with the Double-Bar Lat Pulldown. This kind of program will build up the shoulder mass and strength you need to enable you to go on to Advanced Training. Why I prefer to start beginners out with the Classic and then move on to the Double-Bar Lat Pulldown is that the Classic movement is lifting the barbell off the floor, bringing it up to shoulder height, and holding the arms in order to support it—results in more uniform muscle growth throughout, specifically the back, traps, and arms.

ADVANCED TRAINING

When you go to the level of Advanced Training, you must work on your mass and strength. At this point, you have to work toward overall shoulder development—all three parts of the deltoids as well as the trapezius muscles. Therefore, in addition to exercises like the Double-Bar Lat Pulldown, I changed specifically to the side deltoids. There is a barbell behind the back frame for the front and side delts. Another specialty bar for the rear delts, and I hang on the traps horizontally. For those who believe that the trapezius muscles are more associated with the back than the shoulders, just remember that once you have placed your arms higher than the level of your head in an Advanced Training movement the traps come heavily into play, pulling the shoulders up and in and allowing you to complete the full range of motion.

Toward the end of a number of exercises in this part of the program is further mass and thick for the shoulders, including exercises like Upright Rows for the front delts and the traps. Working Forward is used for front delts and allows you to lower the weight further than with a barbell. The one Cable Lat Pulldown which isolates the side deltoids, and then the Cable Lat Pulldown for the rear deltoids.

THE COMPETITION PROGRAM

The function of the deltoids is very complex, enabling your arm to move in nearly a 360-degree circle—and this means that there are many angles at which you can train your shoulders to bring out their full shape and development.

In this part of the program we have the three deltoids and trapezius muscles. From the forward position, you can develop with parallel pull, and from Double-Bar Rows and Double-Bar Lat Pulldowns.
