

civilization has two measuring points-success or failure. It eulogizes the successful and condemns the failure! But it ignores the process of living by an individual. How one has faced life in its trials, tribulations duty and beauty. The protagonist of the novel, introduced to the readers at the age of mid-fifties, has the wrong start and finds it difficult to cope up with the challenges of life. He is unable to join the mainstream of society and finds himself a loner. Then some thing happens on a particular day, about which his mind has forewarned him! How Tommy Wilhelm encountered the predicament and made efforts to meet the cumulative pressure that has been building up within his inner self?

"As a young man he has rejected his father's profession, medicine, tried for a career in Hollywood, been tricked by a phony talent scout, ended up in sales and lost his sales district due to nepotism." (Cronin, 2003:...)A college dropout, married and divorced, with two children, his finances are in a mess. He somehow wishes to recover the lost ground and wishes to get rich, with the last savings that he owns. Fraudulent Dr. Tamkin plays upon his psychology well. He promises to multiply his savings in the commodity market. The silver lining is, he has fallen in love again with a woman named Olive, but the life itself doesn't hold the olive branch for him. What will happen to an individual when one is a financial wreck and emotionally imbalanced? When one undergoes such grim experiences, anyone would become cynical. "Having quit his longtime job, left his wife and children, and taken a room in a residential hotel, Wilhelm seems intent on unburdening himself of the attachments and responsibilities that limit his freedom. He shares with Huck Finn the belief that personal autonomy somehow leads to personal fulfillment."(Penguin...)
