Psychotherapy And AIDS Lucy A. Treating the Criminal Offender Alexander B. Smith, Louis Berlin, 2013-11-11 The second edition of Treating the Criminal Offender was written in an atmosphere of disillusionment and severe criticism of the traditionalist approach to treatment As crime rates soared the voices of the critics rose in volume and intensity And so this third edition revised toward the end of the decade of the 1980s embodies the shift in emphasis from rehabilitating the offender to protecting the community This shift in our opinion does not reject the goal of changing the offender so as to effect his reintegration into society it uses the strategy of intensive supervision and surveillance only to effect the desired goal The use of electronics to monitor the offender s whereabouts and the swift application of punitive measures following the awareness of any violation are extrinsic techniques of control It is our opinion that for the deep more lasting changes in behavior some form of casework counseling and or psychotherapeutic intervention is essential We are the cohorts who believe in the effectiveness of such treatment modalities when and if applied to the right target population at the appropriate time

emphasis on organisational learning and in self studies of working systems in action In all these psychic activities time and space were created to allow for transitional processes to become alive A therapist a manager a consultant or a layman may create conditions that facilitate or hinder human beings to become engaged in these normal healthy processes but the persons concerned undertake the basic psychic work It is encouraging to notice that more and more clinical institutions organisations and even professional associations are becoming aware of the important and complex interactions between psychic processes and organisational realities The engagement in transitional processes however demands courage Courage that is proper to any pursuit of truth and social justice At times this search generates excitement at other times we become scared by the realities we discover
