Presenter Sky News Jonathan Woodier has written an excellent book on the politics of media control in Southeast Asia. He shows how political elites in the region are using major events such as the 1997 Asian Financial Crisis and the 2001 September 11 terror attacks as well as innovations in media tools such as public relations and the internet to control information flow to their citizens. This book is a must read for anyone interested in an explanation why Southeast Asian models of authoritarianism are surviving. A brilliant analysis it combines media theory with a critical discussion of contemporary developments in Asia. James Gomez, Keio University, Japan. True to the old Chinese adage 'kill a chicken to scare a monkey', the few who once challenged Southeast Asia's ruling elites disappeared and the majority were silent. Crude but effective. Modern times however demand a more sophisticated approach. Ruling elites now strip cultures naked and micro manage people's minds. Their preferred tools of penetration and manipulation are a compliant media and a money hungry PR industry. Jonathan Woodier's insights will ensure that you will never read a newspaper or watch TV news in quite the same way again. Trevor Watson, Professional Public Relations Pty Ltd, Australia. This is an engaging and informative analysis of the media landscape in South East Asia. It uncovers the pervasive impact of the global media on the political process and raises important academic and policy issues in the process. This book is timely and will be a must read for policymakers, academics and students across communications, media studies, politics and democratization as well as for everyone with an interest in current day developments in South East Asia. Joep Cornelissen, Leeds University Business School, UK. Jonathan Woodier's latest work considers what impact the media has upon the democratization process in Southeast Asia. Has the media had a liberalizing effect or become subject to elite control in Southeast Asia and if so why? What role does the global media play in this process particularly given its conglomerization and commoditization? By examining the communications media and its relationship to political change in Southeast Asia, this fascinating study will endeavour to provide both a regional comparative analysis and a more balanced interpretation of the mass communication media in the wake of September 11, 2001. The book also investigates the durability of authoritarian regimes and the enduring capacity of the media controlled state alongside the growing sophistication of political communications particularly the use of PR consultants. The author provides an insider's view with unique insights into the practice of political communication and its development throughout the strategically important region of Southeast Asia with its large Moslem states as well as much further afield to countries such as China and post industrial Europe. As such the book will be warmly welcomed by academics of politics, international relations, media, communications and PR. It will also appeal to researchers interested in political change, the rise of the global media giants and the influence of authoritarian states such as China.

Arnove, 2007-09-16. Comparative Education: The Dialectic of the Global and the Local Third Edition brings together many of the outstanding scholars in the field of comparative and international education to provide new perspectives on the dynamic interplay of global, national and local forces as they shape the functioning and outcomes of education systems in specific contexts. Various chapters in the book call for a rethinking of the nation-state as the basic unit for analyzing school-society relations; provide new ways of conceptualizing equality of educational opportunity and outcomes; call attention to the need to study social movements in relation to educational reform; emphasize the value of feminist, postcolonial and culturally sensitive perspectives to comparative inquiry into the limitations as well as potential of education systems to contribute to individual development and social change; and provide detailed critical accounts of how various international financial and technical assistance agencies shape educational policy and practice in specific regions of the world.

Political Changes in Taiwan Under Ma Ying-jeou Jean-Pierre Cabestan, Jacques de Lisle, 2014-07-17. In 2008 Ma Ying-jeou was elected President of Taiwan and the Kuomintang (KMT) returned to power after eight years of rule by the Democratic Progressive Party (DPP). Since taking power the KMT has faced serious difficulties as economic growth has been sluggish, society has been polarised over issues of identity and policy and rapprochement between Taipei and Beijing has met with suspicion or reservation among large segments of Taiwanese society. Indeed while improved relations with the United States have bolstered Taiwan's security, warming cross-strait relations have in turn made Taiwan more dependent upon and vulnerable to an increasingly powerful China. This book provides a comprehensive analysis of the return of the Kuomintang (KMT) to power and examines the significant domestic, political, economic, social and international challenges and changes that have characterized Taiwan since 2008. It identifies the major domestic, cross-strait and foreign policy trends and addresses key issues such as elections and Taiwan's party system, the role of the presidency and legislature, economic development, social movements, identity politics, developments in cross-strait relations, Taiwan's security environment and national defence policies, relations with the US and Japan. In turn the contributors look towards the final years of Ma's presidency and beyond and the structural realities both domestic and external that will shape Taiwan's future. Political Changes in Taiwan Under Ma Ying-jeou will be of great interest to students and scholars of Taiwan studies, comparative politics, international relations and economics. It will also appeal to policy makers working in the field.

Economic Crisis and Political Change in North Africa Azzedine Layachi, 1998-10-28. A collective effort by American and North African scholars, this volume provides a comprehensive analysis of recent economic, social and political events in North Africa. It shows how the Maghrebi states and societies are currently at a very important junction as they try to adjust to different ways of doing things in new regional and international orders Using a political economy approach the book focuses on a series of issues raised by the interaction between economic crisis and reform on the one hand and political change or stagnation on the other The author and his contributors provide a comprehensive and up to date survey of particular value to scholars and researchers of the Arab world in general and North Africa in particular Vietnamese Health Care System in Change Kerstin Priwitzer,2003-08-01 Within the last twenty years a large scale bottom up privatization has taken place in Vietnam changing and dismantling the public health care system This process has led to severe tensions inherent in the transitional society of Vietnam between equity and access to health care support especially for the poor elderly migrants and ethnic minorities on the one hand and its efficiency on the other hand The book traces the reform efforts to modernize the health care system by the Communist Party of Vietnam and the Vietnamese government The author bases her findings on little known primary literature and interviews with key stakeholders of the policy network involved in the reform of the health care system thereby painting an authentic atmospheric picture of the profound changes in the health care system in Vietnam Democracy and Political Change in the Third World Jeff Haynes,2003-09-02 This book examines the experience of democracy in developing countries such as Mexico Zambia India and Indonesia It considers the patchy democratic record of such countries as well as investigating the relationship between external and domestic factors to democratisation The contributors assess the importance to democratic progress of a number of key variables including the institutionalisation of political parties and electoral systems the role of civil society the influence of external actors such as the European Union Politics and the Soviet System Thomas F. Remington,1989-06-18 This collection of essays focuses on topics pertaining to Soviet propaganda and policy making Among the essays there is a study of the view of international relations presented by Soviet TV news a survey of development in comparative communist studies and an analysis of recent changes Political Change and Consolidation A. Freedman,2006-11-13 This book explores the varying reactions to the political turmoil in Asia in the late 1990s by looking at external pressures from global actors the IMF and US security policy popular protests the nature of the opposition and elite coalition formation dissolution at the highest levels of government Ibss: Political Science: 1991 British Library of Political and Economic Science,1993 IBSS is the essential tool for librarians university departments research institutions and any public or private institution whose work requires access to up to date and comprehensive knowledge of the social sciences Religion and Political Change in the Modern World Jeffrey Haynes,2015-09-07 The purpose of the book is to ascertain whether there is a generic impact that religion brings to bear on recent political changes in the modern world Over the last two decades or so there have been increasing numbers of political issues with which various manifestations of religion engage This impact is not restricted exclusively to countries in the developed or developing world Instead we seem to be seeing a widespread impact of religion on politics which defies earlier assumptions about secularisation This presumed that the more modern a country is then the less likely it is that religion will play a significant political role Recent evidence is however firmly to the contrary the degree of modernity in a country does not correspond well with the amount of religiosity in a country nor with the role that religion can play in politics The book focuses on the recent return of religion to politics It assesses how religion is involved in recent examples of political change in various countries including the impact of religion on democratization The book features both theoretical chapters and case studies The case studies examine different countries Israel Egypt Morocco and Iran and regions Sub Saharan Africa with a focus on Islam Judaism and Protestantism and Catholicism The overall aim is to get a sense of what is happening when religion and politics interact The chapters in this book were originally published in Democratization

Political Change and Territoriality in Indonesia Ehito

Kimura,2013-05-07 What makes large multi ethnic states hang together At a time when ethnic and religious conflict has gained global prominence the territorial organization of states is a critical area of study Exploring how multi ethnic and geographically dispersed states grapple with questions of territorial administration and change this book argues that territorial change is a result of ongoing negotiations between states and societies where mutual and overlapping interests can often emerge It focuses on the changing dynamics of central local relations in Indonesia Since the fall of Suharto s New Order government new provinces have been sprouting up throughout the Indonesian archipelago After decades of stability this sudden change in Indonesia s territorial structure is puzzling The author analyses this provincial proliferation which is driven by multilevel alliances across different territorial administrative levels or territorial coalitions He demonstrates that national level institutional changes including decentralization and democratization explain the timing of the phenomenon Variations also occur based on historical cultural and political contexts at the regional level The concept of territorial coalitions challenges the dichotomy between centre and periphery that is common in other studies of central local relations This book will be of interest to scholars in the fields of comparative politics political geography history and Asian and Southeast Asian politics

Rethinking Power, Institutions and Ideas in World Politics Amitav Acharya, 2014-01-10. The study of international relations has traditionally been dominated by Western ideas and practices and marginalized the voice and experiences of the non-Western states and societies. As the world moves to a post-Western era, it is imperative that the field of IR acquires a more global meaning and relevance. Drawing together the work of renowned scholar Amitav Acharya and framed by a new introduction and conclusion written for the volume, this book exposes the narrow meaning currently attached to some of the key concepts and ideas in IR and calls for alternative and broader understandings of them. The need for recasting the discipline has motivated and undergirded Acharya's own scholarship since his entry into the field over three decades ago. This book reflects his own engagement, quarrels and compromise and concludes with suggestions for new pathways to a Global IR: a forward-looking and inclusive enterprise that is reflective of the multiple and global heritage of IR in an changing and interconnected world. It is essential reading for anyone who is concerned about the history, development and future of international relations and international relations theory.

The Rise of International Parliaments Frank Schimmelfennig, Thomas Winzen, Tobias Lenz, Jofre Rocabert, Lorian Crasnic, Cristina Gherasimov, Jana Lipps, Dennis Mumford, 2020-12-14. International parliaments are on the rise. An increasing number of international organizations establishes international parliamentary institutions or IPIs which bring together members of national parliaments or in rare cases elected representatives of member state citizens. Yet IPIs have generally remained powerless institutions with at best a consultative role in the decision-making process of international organizations. Why do the member states of international organizations create IPIs but do not vest them with relevant institutional powers? This study argues that neither the functional benefits of delegation nor the internalization of democratic norms answer this question convincingly. Rather, IPIs are best understood as an instrument of strategic legitimation. By establishing institutions that mimic national parliaments, governments seek to ensure that audiences at home and in the wider international environment recognize their international organizations as democratically legitimate. At the same time, they seek to avoid being effectively constrained by IPIs in international governance. The Rise of International Parliaments provides a systematic study of the establishment and empowerment of IPIs based on a novel dataset. In a statistical analysis covering the world's most relevant international organizations and a series of case studies from all major world regions, we find two varieties of international parliamentarization. International organizations with general purpose and high authority create and empower IPIs to legitimate their region building projects domestically Alternatively the establishment of IPIs is induced by the international diffusion of democratic norms and prominent templates above all that of the European Parliament Transformations in Governance is a major academic book series from Oxford University Press It is designed to accommodate the impressive growth of research in comparative politics international relations public policy federalism and environmental and urban studies concerned with the dispersion of authority from central states to supranational institutions subnational governments and public private networks It brings together work that advances our understanding of the organization causes and consequences of multilevel and complex governance The series is selective containing annually a small number of books of exceptionally high quality by leading and emerging scholars The series is edited by Liesbet Hooghe and Gary Marks of the University of North Carolina Chapel Hill and Walter Mattli of the University of Oxford
