Rogers, Louise E. Donnelly, 2008-02-02 Rubor redness tumor swelling calor heat and dolor pain are the classical signs of inflammation These features are obvious in the skin where injury or disease causes flare wheal and painful burning sensations Vasodilation underlies the flare and heat plasma exudation the swelling and action of sensory nerves relays pain In chronic conditions skin biopsies show inflammatory cell infiltrate Inflammation is not unique to the skin and contrutes to disease and repair processes in other organ systems in the body From the viewpoint of this volume lung inflammation is now recognized as central to the pathophysiology of a number of severe respiratory conditions the two most common being asthma and chronic obstructive pulmonary disease COPD In asthma and to a lesser extent COPD there is evidence of vasodilatation with congestion of blood vessels accompanied by reddening of the airway mucosa and of plasma exudation leading to swelling of the airway wall Similarly although less pronounced than in the skin there is evidence of pain for example the pleasant chest sensations associated with asthma attacks Understanding the pathogenesis of airway inflammation will enable rational design of drugs to effectively treat conditions such as asthma and COPD However whereas immediate access to the skin facilitates investigation of disease processes the lung although open to atmosphere is much less accessible Consequently the investigation of lung inflammation is usually indirect Thus a wide variety of research techniques are used
