Self-Management Dr.N.N.Shrivastava, 2017-06-30 There are two kinds of worlds one inside and the other outside each individual Individuals have to manage both worlds It is put forward for consideration that the management of the world inside is a precondition for an effective management of the world outside oneself namely the management of the money man material machine marketing etc The study of the world inside an individual constitutes the subject matter of self management An individual is a living organism The organism is self contained self regulated and self sustained The management of a self regulated order appears to be unnecessary But every individual is endowed with the power to choose freely and make ones own decisions The use of the power of conscious thought by individuals may or may not disturb the self regulated order of the living organism

Moral Passion and Christian Ethics Robin Gill,2017-03-06 In this book Robin Gill argues that moral passion and rational ethical deliberation are not enemies and that moral passion often lurks behind many apparently rational ethical commitments He also contends that though moral passion is a key component of truly selfless moral action without rational ethical deliberation it can also be extremely dangerous Gill maintains that a reanalysis of moral passion is overdue He inspects the gap between the purely rational accounts of ethics provided by some moral philosophers and the normative positions that they espouse and or the moral actions that they pursue He also contends that Christian ethicists have not been adept at identifying their own implicit moral passion or at explaining why it is that doctrinal positions generate passionately held moral conclusions Using a range of disciplines including cognitive science and moral psychology alongside the more usual disciplines of moral philosophy and religious ethics Gill also makes links with moral passion in other world faith traditions
