Globalization and the Rise of Mass Education David Mitch, Gabriele Cappelli, 2019-10-24 This edited collection explores the historical determinants of the rise of mass schooling and human capital accumulation based on a global long run perspective focusing on a variety of countries in Europe the Middle East Asia Africa and the Americas The authors analyze the increasing importance attached to globalization as a factor in how social institutional and economic change shapes national and regional educational trends Although recent research in economic history has increasingly devoted more attention to global forces in shaping the institutions and fortunes of different world regions the link and contrast between national education policies and the forces of globalization remains largely under researched within the field The globalization of the world economy starting in the nineteenth century brought about important changes that affected school policy itself as well as the process of long term human capital accumulation Large migrations prompted brain drain and gain across countries alongside rapid transformations in the sectoral composition of the economy and demand for skills Ideas on education and schooling circulated more easily bringing about relevant changes in public policy while the changing political voice of winners and losers from globalization determined the path followed by public choice Similarly religion and the spread of missions came to play a crucial role for the rise of schooling globally

Handbook of the Sociology of Education Maureen T. Hallinan, 2006-11-24 The aim of the Handbook of Sociology of Education is to present the most theoretically grounded and empirically rigorous sociological analyses of schools to date The authors are distinguished researchers in the field Their contributions to the Handbook offer major theoretical perspectives on the schooling process and describe significant empirical studies of schools and their effects on individuals and society. The research presented in the Handbook is built on three fundamental tenets of sociology. First, the authors adopt the perspective that schools are a central institution in society. An understanding of the function of schooling in social life is enhanced by viewing schools as interrelated with other societal institutions. The study of how the context of schooling influences education processes is critical to an understanding of school outcomes. Rather than being determined solely by ascribed and achieved characteristics, an individual's cognitive and social development are influenced heavily by the structures and networks in which the individual is embedded. Communities, families, schools, and social groups are critical elements in the educative process. By viewing the school as a societal institution and highlighting the interaction between context and individual behavior, the Handbook chapters provide a broader and deeper understanding of the determinants of learning in contemporary society. The second sociological insight that guides the research in the Handbook is that the school is a social system.

Education Systems in Historical, Cultural, and Sociological Perspectives Daniel Tröhler, Ragnhild Barbu, 2012-03-26 For nearly half a century, research on education systems has been increasingly popular. However, this popularity was long restricted primarily to internationally linked policy makers and education planners, often backed up by international organizations such as the OECD, but also by governmental or para-governmental organizations within the individual countries. These institutional affiliations provided education research with a specific character that often centres on notions such as excellence, efficiency, or standards. The specific comparative character of this policy-driven research agenda triggered the development of suitable research techniques such as comparative statistics and pertinent sub-disciplines such as cognitive psychology. Backed up by powerful global institutions, this agenda purported to be rather unique and it tended to ignore the cultural complexity of the educational field and those research approaches that address this complexity. This volume includes different historical, cultural, and sociological approaches to the education systems and to questions as to how research on education systems can be undertaken beyond the parameters of the existing research agenda. They demonstrate how pertinent problems of research on education systems can only be tackled taking an international and interdisciplinary approach with regard to both research questions and methods concerning education systems.
