

Michael remembered he was supposed to be in Sport Magazine in the locker room, so they had to wait. The guy wrote in the article about the office. I guess sort of for an audience with the states. I didn't know what I was. He thought I was a relations guy, maybe MJ's personal guy.

Michael had been after me to join him and Adolfi on his private jet the morning after the game back to Chicago. I was really torn. He wanted to go to Chicago and play golf for a couple of days and I was to go. He had leased this jet, a comfortable plane, maybe 10. It sounded like fun, sitting there playing being waited on by the stewards.

I just couldn't do it. I was underwriting the team. Norris had a promotional harem the next day. I had leave, not responsibly anyway. I had to take care of the arena.

Jordan's golf clubs were in my trunk so I had a friend Butler, run them down to Brown Field, where MJ was with his plane. He might leave his baggage behind, but the golf clubs.

I caught up with MJ on August 8, when I flew out. He had his limo driver waiting for me at the airport. I thought have been wearing track shoes. We raced to Michael's house. We threw all of our gear into a minivan and then raced to the jet. We headed for Charlotte, N.C., playing cards all the way. The next few days reminded me of that movie Grease where all these people are going coast-to-coast it was 1950s. The difference was that we were going to Durham to heaven know when it was just forward.

Michael MJ and his friend playing cards on the jet.
