On a train from Paris to Rome on his way to surprise his lover the businessman L on Delmont begins to mull over his past and question the decisions he has made about his future These musings together with his impressions of the unfolding scenery conjectures about his fellow passengers and some recurring leitmotifs form the basis of a riveting narrative that provides a psychological case study of an everyman and subtly illustrates the onset of the protagonist's doubts and fears Published in 1957 and awarded the prestigious Prix Renaudot Michel Butor's groundbreaking third novel remains the most popular and widely read work of the nouveau roman genre Famously written in the second person in order to immerse the reader more fully into the psyche of the main character Changing Track pulls off the rare feat of being at once experimental and accessible disquieting and engrossing Mobile Michel Butor, 2004 Considered by many to be his greatest book Michel Butor's Mobile is the result of the six months the author spent traveling across America The text is composed from a wide range of materials including city names road signs advertising slogans catalog listings newspaper accounts of the 1893 World's Fair Native American writings and the history of the Freedomland theme park Butor weaves bits and pieces from these diverse sources into a collage resembling an abstract painting the book is dedicated to Jackson Pollock or a patchwork quilt that by turns is both humorous and quite disturbing This travelogue captures in both a textual and visual way the energy and contradictions of American life and history The French New Novel John Sturrock, 1969 Passing Time & A Change of Heart Michel Butor, 1969 Michel Butor [by] Michael Spencer Michael Clifford Spencer, 1974 Michael Butor and George Petros Madelaine Santschi, Jennifer Waelti-Walters, Michael Butor, 1983-12-01 Time Table Michel Butor, Passage de Milan Michel Butor, 1954 Improvisations on Butor Michel Butor, 1996

From the Foreword To begin this Crosscurrents Series with Michel Butor's intellectual autobiography is itself something of an aesthetic and philosophical coup If as Lois Oppenheim suggests in her cogent introduction most of Butor's prodigious output has been a dialogue with his and others work then this current volume is a dialogue with that dialogue Butor on Butor on Butor Among the most celebrated writers of his generation in France Michel Butor has produced numerous books of fiction criticism and poetry In this book he evaluates the evolution of his prolific career offering an intimate look at his own writing and at the idea of writing Transformation of Writing the fourth volume in his series of Improvisations explores the development of his long and rich career encompassing more than 500 works ranging from fiction radio plays and critical essays to collaborations with composers photographers and painters against the background of post World War II Western literature Examining his own work as he would that of any other author he sheds light on his extraordinary creative itinerary and on the climate output and aesthetic perspectives that have dominated the past half century in France and the rest of Europe Butor situates his writing outside the tradition of the nouveau roman and outside postmodernism placing himself in the tradition of Rabelais Montaigne Pound and Joyce whose erudition and love of language infused their work with remarkable originality He explores the relation of fiction to reality especially in the context of nationalist and colonialist illusion In addition he describes the influences on his career of his early study of philosophy and of his extensive travel to Egypt the United States Japan and Australia Butor himself worked with the editor and translator of this first English version of Transformation of Writing on questions of translation and annotation The work retains the spontaneity of the course of lectures from which it derives delivered on the eve of his retirement from the University of Geneva Lois Oppenheim is associate professor of French at Montclair State University in New Jersey She is the author or editor of more than forty articles and five books including Directing Beckett Intentionality and Intersubjectivity A Phenomenological Study of La Modification and Three Decades of the French New Novel She is the general editor of The Beckett Circle Elinor S Miller is professor emerita of French and Humanities at Embry Riddle Aeronautical University in Daytona Beach Florida Her scholarly publications deal primarily with the works of Michel Butor including translations of 6 180 000 litres d eau par seconde and Fronti res and with black francophone writers of the Antilles and West Africa Inventory Michel Butor,1969
