Fiedler, John L.,Mwangi, Dena M.,2016-11-18 As the nature of global malnutrition changes there is a growing need and increasing urgency for more and better information about food consumption and dietary patterns The past two decades have seen a dramatic increase in the number availability and analysis of the food consumption data collected in a variety of multipurpose household surveys referred to collectively as household consumption and expenditure surveys HCESs These surveys are heterogeneous and their quality varies substantially by country Still they share some common shortcomings in their measurement of food consumption nutrient intakes and nutrition status that undermine their relevance and reliability for purposes of designing and implementing food policies and programs This review crafts a strategic approach to the unfinished global agenda of improving HCESs collection of food consumption data Starting with the priority studies recommended by a 100 country HCES review Smith Dupriez and Troubat 2014 it focuses on a strategic subset of those studies that deal most directly and exclusively with the measurement of food and that are of fundamental importance to all HCES stakeholders in low and middle income countries Drawing from the literature this study provides a more detailed more circumspect justification as to why these particular studies are needed while identifying key hypotheses explaining why these studies are of growing urgency and demonstrating why now is a propitious time for undertaking them The review also identifies important study design considerations while pointing out potential challenges to successful implementation stemming from technical capacity economic administrative and political considerations Six key studies are rank ordered from a global perspective as follows taking into account 1 the likely shared consensus that a topic is an important source of measurement error in estimating consumption 2 the perceived urgency of the need for addressing a particular source of measurement error 3 the perceived likelihood of success that is that the efforts will improve the accuracy of measurement 4 whether or not the study entails modifying the questionnaire 5 the ease with which a study may begin and 6 the extent to which the study is independent of necessary negotiations with existing HCES stakeholders because of the types of changes it is likely to entail in either the questionnaire or the way the data have traditionally been processed

Research Methods for Digital Work and Organization Gillian Symon, Katrina Pritchard, Christine Hine, 2021-10-21 Digital work has become increasingly common taking a wide variety of forms including working from home mobile work gig work crowdsourcing and online volunteering It is organizationally interpretively spatially and temporally complex An array of innovative methodologies have begun to emerge to capture this complexity whether through re purposing existing tools devising entirely novel methods or mixing old and new This volume brings together some of these techniques in an accessible sourcebook for management business organizational and work researchers It presents a range of innovative methods which capture and analyse digitally related work practices through reflexive accounts of real world research projects and elucidates the range of challenges such methods may raise for research practice It outlines debates and recommendations and provides further reading and information to support research practice The book is organised in four sections that reflect different areas of focus and methodological approaches working with screens digital working practices distributed work and organizing and digital traces of work It then concludes by reflecting on the methodological issues research ethics requisite skills and future of research given the intensification of digital work during a global pandemic that has impacted all aspects of our lives
