KEY POINTS

- Nutritional support is increasingly recognized as an important aspect of management of critically ill patients
- The emphasis of nutritional support of critically ill patients centers on maintaining body condition and nutritional status, and not necessarily achieving weight gain
- As critically ill patients already have a high risk for developing complications, considerable efforts should be devoted to minimize nutrition-related morbidity
- Current emphasis in the provision of calories to critically ill animals is to start with the animal's resting energy requirements rather than overestimate calories by use of illness factors
- Whenever possible, the use of the enteral route is preferred to the parenteral route for nutritional support

Introduction

In recent years, great advances have been made in the field of critical care nutrition. While nutrition was once regarded as a low priority supportive measure, it is increasingly becoming recognized as an important therapeutic intervention in the care of critically ill patients. In human intensive care units, nutrition is not only a means of supportive therapy, but a means to modulate even severe diseases. While these developing applications are still years away from being standards in veterinary medicine, they highlight the possibilities of critical care nutrition in veterinary medicine. The current status of veterinary critical care nutrition and the major focus of this article involve careful selection of the patients most likely to benefit from nutritional support, deciding when to intervene, and optimizing nutritional support to individual patients.

Rationale for nutritional support in critical illness

Critical illness induces unique metabolic changes in animals that put them at high risk for malnutrition and its deleterious effects. An important distinction in the body's response to inadequate nutritional intake occurs in disease (stressed starvation) compared to a healthy state (simple starvation). During fasting in the healthy state, utilization of glycogen stores is the primary source of energy. However, glycogen stores are quickly depleted, especially in strict carnivores such as the cat, and this leads to the initial mobilization of amino acids from muscle stores. Within days, there is a metabolic shift towards the preferential use of stored fat deposits, sparing catabolic effects on lean muscle tissue. In diseased states, the inflammatory response triggers

Emergency General Surgery in Geriatrics Rifat Latifi, Fausto Catena, Federico Coccolini, 2021-03-29. There is a growing need for a book on emergency general surgery in the elderly as adults age 65 and older are the fastest growing segment of the population worldwide and their number is expected to double to 89 million between now and 2050. Based on these changing demographics it is expected that there will be a concurrent rise in the demand for a variety of surgical services including vascular surgery with a projected growth of 31% and general surgery with a projected growth of 18% as well as in all sub disciplines of surgery: thoracic, cardiac, oncology, hepatobiliary, transplant, plastic, colorectal, orthopedic, gynecologic, urology and neurosurgery. In addition, older surgical patients often require a different level of care than younger patients during the preoperative, intraoperative and postoperative phases. Many of our geriatric population have multiple chronic illnesses beyond the one for which surgery is required and therefore are prone to developing postoperative complications functional decline loss of independence and other undesirable outcomes In response this book offers surgeons geriatrists and nurses state of the art surgical approaches and essential information on the complex perioperative care of the elderly

Care of the Critically Ill Patient Jack Tinker, Warren M. Zapol, 2012-12-06 Nine years have passed since the first edition of Care of the Critically Ill Patient was published As its editors Maurice Rapin and I were fortified by the many positive and helpful comments of reviewers and readers the work appeared to have fulfilled our original aims and objectives Intensive care medicine has of course advanced and changed in many ways since 1982 and it therefore seemed appropriate to consider the preparation of a second edition Encouraged by the reception of the first and the timely prompting of the publishers we began in 1986 to prepare for a new edition Caring for critically ill patients is of universal concern and we were therefore delighted when Warren Zapol joined us as C n editor widening our international base The three of us subsequently spent many happy and productive times together planning the content priorities scale and contributions for the new edition A great tragedy then overcame us Maurice Rapin died suddenly His death deprived us of a true friend and colleague who had been an international pioneer during the development of intensive care medicine I will always remember with affection and professional pride the many hours he and I worked together in preparing the first edition of this book and also as founding editors of the now firmly established journal Intensive Care Medicine An obituary written by Warren Zapol that appeared in the journal follows the Preface
