Sumatra is less familiar and is scarcely represented in the major public collections. On the basis of the linguistic consonance between the thousand or more modern languages spoken in Oceania, anthropologists and archaeologists have begun to trace the cultural links throughout this area in particular through the rituals and beliefs which are often the inspiration for the forms and functions of the artifacts. Masks in human or animal form made of tortoiseshell, wood, dried leaves or clay; drums, shields and batons; multicolored clothing for war and peace; intricate jewelry as well as a wide variety of everyday containers and implements—all the treasures in this collection display a sophistication of ornament and technical expertise which rival the products of ancient European civilizations. Scholarly essays by over thirty international experts focus on each island or civilization and form a fascinating study which will certainly become the standard work in this field of interest to both students and the general reader.
