<https://www.scooparticles.com/news-society-articles/economics-articles/trends-nature-national-development-planning-nigeria-1789214.html>

"Development planning is about coming up with well-researched and well-reasoned plans that prioritize and synchronize activities, given the scarce resources at disposal. The aim of any national development plan should therefore be to utilize the available resources more effectively to achieve well-defined objectives" (Alweendo, 2017). The government plays a key role in attaining economic growth and development, and it's expected for national governments to provide a meaningful periodic plan through which the general welfare of society can improve economically, socially, politically, among others. Nigeria like many other countries has produced different heads of state, who came up with multifarious national development plans in the search for economic growth and development.

The First National Development Plan (1962-1968) was profounded and adopted after the attainment of Independence in 1960, the national government of Sir Abubakar Tafawa Balewa decided to continue with the tradition of having a development plan after the colonial era. The plan was inaugurated with the aim of buttressing economic growth, and truncate the dependence on external ascendancy for the development of the nation. The objectives of the plan are to increase the country's growth domestic product, to achieve sustainable development and employment, to bring the equitable distribution of income, to improve the standard of living, and maintain financial stability. While the cornerstone of the plan focused on human resources, industry, infrastructure, natural resources, balance of payment, agriculture, transportation, electric power, health, and education. The plan quantitative targets are the growth rate, private consumption, government consumption, public sector investment, private investment, savings, and import surplus. The nature of the first plan was impressive and compendious, but the political cataclysm in the country which resulted in a civil war made the plan to become almost redundant.
