Representing Women Susan Sage Heinzelman, 1994 This anthology explores the provocative intersection between feminist literary and legal theories Written by feminist thinkers from law and literature discourses that each produce culturally powerful representations of women these essays contest the boundaries that usually separate these disciplines and thereby alter the possibilities of those representations that have traditionally disempowered women

Beginning with an exploration of the ways in which women are represented how they either tell or have their stories told in literature in the law in a courtroom this collection demonstrates the interrelatedness of the legal and the literary Whether considering the status of medieval women readers or assessing the effectiveness and extent of contemporary rape law reform the essays show that power first comes with telling one's own story and that the degree and effect of that power are determined by the cultural significance of the forum in which the story is presented But telling the story is not enough One must also be aware of how the story is contained within traditional constructs or boundaries and is thus limited in its effects as Carol Sanger's essay on mothers and legal sexual identity makes clear One must also recognize how a story might perpetuate an ideological agenda that is not in the best interests of the storyteller as Elizabeth Butler Cullingford shows in her reading of Yeats's Leda and the Swan and one must know the historical context of a story and of its telling as Anne B Goldstein's essay on lesbian narratives discloses Breaking down the boundaries between law and literature this anthology makes evident the ways in which the effect of women's stories has been constrained and expands the range of possibilities for those who represent women tell women's stories or present women's issues Representing Women makes the retelling of old stories about women compelling and the telling of new ones both necessary and possible Contributors Kathryn Abrams Linda Brodkey Rita Copeland Elizabeth Butler Cullingford Margaret Anne Doody Susan B Estrich Michelle Fine Anne B Goldstein Angela P Harris Susan Sage Heinzelman Christine L Krueger Martha Minow Carol Sanger Judy Scales Trent

Riverine Border Practices Thanachate Wisaijorn, 2021-11-01 This book focuses on the ways in which unofficial modes of border crossings are practised by the Thai Ban along the Mekong Thai Lao border In doing so the book assesses how these border crossings can be theorised as a contribution to existing literature on borderland studies With that the book discusses the importance of the notion of the Third Space and its effects on the pluralities of border crossings in the borderland by weaving together spatial negotiations temporal negotiations and negotiations of political subjectivity To illustrate the importance and complexity of the notion of the Third Space the borderland of Khong Chiam Sanasomboun an area composed of quasi state checkpoints as well as mobile checkpoints is used as a case study The author employs an ethnographic approach using the four methods of participant observations interviews interpreting visual presentations and essay readings to examine the everyday practices of the Thai Ban people in crossing the border between the riverine villages in the two nation states of Thailand and Lao PDR With this the findings in the fieldwork reveal that people engaged in everyday border crossings in the riverine area do not simply embrace or reject the existence of Thai Lao territory Most of the time the stance of Thai Ban people is the mixture of subversion rejection and acceptance of the boundary resulting in the sedentary assumption in the form of Thai Lao territory co existing with people s everyday mobility
