Shapiro, 2020-04-29 What stands between us and authoritarianism seems increasingly fragile. Democratic practices are under attack by foreign intrusion into elections, voter suppression, restricts citizen participation. Nations are turning to autocratic leaders in the face of rapid social change. Democratic values and open society can only be preserved if citizens can discover and claim their voices. We access society through our organisations yet the collective voices and irrationalities of these organisations do not currently offer clear pathways for individuals to locate themselves. How can we move through the mounting chaos of our social systems through our multiple roles in groups and institutions to find a voice that matters? What kind of perspective will allow institutional leaders to facilitate the discovery of active citizenship and support engagement? This book draws on psychodynamic systems thinking to offer a new understanding of the journey from being an individual to joining society as a citizen. With detailed stories, the steps and the conscious and unconscious linkages from being a family member to entering outside groups to taking up and making sense of institutional roles illuminate the process of claiming the citizen role With the help of leaders who recognise and utilise the dynamics of social systems there may be hope for us as citizens to use our institutional experiences to discover a place to stand Morality, Rationality and Efficiency Richard M. The Revolt of the Primitive Howard Schwartz, 2017-09-29

The Revolt of the Primitive explores the psychological dynamics of political correctness and gender warfare. Author Howard Schwartz argues that perceptions of men as abusers, sexual predators, and deadbeat dads have become firmly entrenched in our culture due to fantasy rather than solid objective facts. This volume delves into the psychological forces that have given rise to these ideas and reveals the hard facts about men and women in our society. Schwartz illustrates how feminists have taken the most vulgar stereotype of men and pronounced it a universal and inviolable cultural norm. He then examines his thesis in the context of work and the work organization, discussing how the feminization of the workplace has been driven by the archetypal need to remake it into a maternal world, banishing the limitations that shape survival and progress. He examines the traditional sexual division of labor and its alleged oppressive nature. He also discusses the psychological forces that drive the idea of placing women in combat roles in the military. Howard S. Schwartz is a professor of organizational behavior in the School of Business Administration at Oakland University in Rochester, Michigan, and is one of the founders of the International Society for Psychoanalytic Study of Organizations (ISPSO).
