Schools for a New Century Dwight W. Allen,1992-01-22 This book presents optimistic alternatives to the current educational reform movement which has not produced substantial improvement Dwight W Allen advocates structural reform of education in virtually every aspect organization staff curriculum and political accountability His central proposal is for the establishment of a national system of experimental schools well funded for research experimentation evaluation and demonstration but with realistic operating expenses The biggest obstacle to reform is the lack of confidence in those who might establish coordinate and implement it The establishment of an extensive coordinated national experimental school system with voluntary participation by all those involved would provide a relatively nonthreatening environment in which to try new alternatives in all aspects of public education The first requirement is a new vision of education one that has the capacity for quick implementation of new curricular and instructional programs Allen advocates the creation of a well designed national curriculum which would enhance local control of schools With a portion of the curriculum standardized local school districts and teachers would have the time and resources to develop local curriculum options Radical

Eric Schockman,Greg Hise,1996-08-20 The Los Angeles region is increasingly being held up as a prototype for the collective urban future of the United States Yet it is probably the least understood most under studied major city in the US Very few people beyond the boundaries of Southern California have an accurate appreciation of what the region is who lives there and what it does This groundbreaking collection of essays brings together well respected contributors to dispel the myths about Southern California and to begin the process of rethinking Los Angeles Urban School Reform Frederick M. The Dimensions of Time and the Challenge of School

Reform Patricia C. Gandara, 2000-01-01 As the education reform movement matures into its second decade it is clear that many promising efforts have fallen short in their attempts to create real school change One reason for this is that the process of school reform is much more complex than most reformers realized or were willing to acknowledge The Dimensions of Time and the Challenge of School Reform points to another problem the problem of time and its role in both the success and failure of school reform efforts The importance of understanding the role that time plays in both learning and instruction and finding ways to provide time for teachers grappling with change and students learning to accommodate a new language and culture are important themes in this book This book is directed to policymakers and practitioners as well as to academics in that it combines theory with the real world experiences of many who have been active in the school reform movement and who have learned through trial and error how to think about time in innovative ways Back cover

Schoolhouse Shams Peter Downs, 2013

Written by a parent and school board member who first embraced many of the ideas of the modern school reform movement

Schoolhouse Shams lays bare much of the mythology and misinformation that underpin many of the failed school reform policies of the last decade. Many of the top strategies of the highly publicized school reform movement already have been tried out in St Louis with disastrous results. Along with demonstrating the failure of school reform prescriptions to improve education, the experience of St Louis demonstrates that the ideological premise of the reform movement—that a focus on providing opportunities for private profit taking will necessarily improve schools—is both wrong and conflicts with the ideals of democracy, accountability, and justice.

The Color of School Reform Jeffrey R. Henig, Richard C. Hula, Marion Orr, Desiree S. Pedescleaux, 2001-01-22

Why is it so difficult to design and implement fundamental educational reform in large city schools in spite of broad popular support for change? How does the politics of race complicate the challenge of building and sustaining coalitions for improving urban schools? These questions have provoked a great deal of theorizing, but this is the first book to explore the issues on the basis of extensive solid evidence. Here a group of political scientists examines education reform in Atlanta, Baltimore, Detroit, and Washington D C where local governmental authority has passed from white to black leaders. The authors show that black administrative control of big city school systems has not translated into broad improvements in the quality of public education within black led cities. Race can be crucial, however, in fostering the broad civic involvement perhaps most needed for school reform. In each city examined, reform efforts often arise but collapse partly because leaders are unable to craft effective political coalitions that would commit community resources to a concrete policy agenda. What undermines the leadership, according to the authors, is the complex role of race in each city. First, public authority does not guarantee access to private resources usually still controlled by white economic elites. Second, local authorities must interact with external actors at the state and national levels who remain predominantly white. Finally, issues of race divide the African American community itself and often place limits on what leaders can and cannot do. Filled with insightful explanations together with recommendations for policy change, this book is an important component of the debate now being waged among researchers, education activists, and the community as a whole.

The New Politics Of Race And Gender Catherine Marshall, 2002-11-01

What can schools do to eliminate sexism and racism? By the 1990s, with shifting demographics, disillusionment with conventional liberal policies, and new political coalitions, the politics of race and gender requires new analyses. The chapters in this book demonstrate how the politics of race and gender enter into proposals for parental choice, business involvement in schools, definitions of good leadership, special schools for minority children, curriculum debates, and debates about testing and accountability. Catherine Marshall provides the political historical context of race and gender politics in schools, and the following eighteen chapters provide a greater in depth analysis. The chapters include work of scholars and policy analysts focusing on policy and policy implementation at all levels of school politics in the US, Australia, and Israel. The book ends with critical policy analysis, raising deep theoretical questions and pulling out the chronic race and gender issues in education politics.
