Utility, Probability, and Human Decision Making Dirk Wendt, C.A. Vlek, 1975-12-31 Human decision making involves problems which are being studied with increasing interest and sophistication They range from controversial political decisions via individual consumer decisions to such simple tasks as signal discriminations Although it would seem that decisions have to do with choices among available actions of any kind there is general agreement that decision making research should pertain to choice problems which cannot be solved without a predecisional stage of finding choice alternatives weighing evidence and judging values The ultimate objective of scientific research on decision making is two fold a to develop a theoretically sound technology for the optimal solution of decision problems and b to formulate a descriptive theory of human decision making The latter may in turn protect decision makers from being caught in the traps of their own limitations and biases Recently in decision making research the strong emphasis on well defined laboratory tasks is decreasing in favour of more realistic studies in various practical settings This may well have been caused by a growing awareness of the fact that decision behaviour is strongly determined by situational factors which makes it necessary to look into processes of interaction between the decision maker and the relevant task environment Almost inevitably there is a parallel shift of interest towards problems of utility measurement and the evaluation of consequences

Organization and Decision Theory Ira Horowitz, 2012-12-06 Ira

Horowitz Depending upon one's perspective the need to choose among alternatives can be an unwelcome but unavoidable responsibility an exciting and challenging opportunity a run of the mill activity that one performs seemingly without thinking very much about it or perhaps something in between Your most recent selections from a restaurant menu from a set of jobs or job candidates or from a rent or buy or sell or lease option are cases in point Oftentimes we are involved in group decision processes such as the choice of a president wherein one group member's unwelcome responsibility is another's exciting opportunity Many of us that voted in the presidential elections of both 1956 and 1984 irrespective of political affiliation experienced both emotions others just pulled the lever or punched the card without thinking very much about it Arriving at either an individual or a group decision can sometimes be a time consuming torturous and traumatic process that results in a long regretted choice that could have been reached right off the bat On other occasions the just let's get it over with and get out of here solution to a long festering problem can yield rewards that are reaped for many
