Nutrition and Cancer Prevention Thomas Prates Ong, Fernando Salvador Moreno, 2019-11-27 Cancer is a major global public health problem. Among different environmental and lifestyle factors contributing to cancer risk diet is a key one. On the one hand obesity and increased consumption of red and processed meat ethanol sugar and saturated fatty acids are associated with increased cancer risk. On the other hand consumption of micronutrients such as vitamin D selenium zinc folate and bioactive compounds from fruits and vegetables is associated with decreased risk. Written by an influential international team of experts this book presents and discusses current topics on nutrition and cancer prevention. It covers both nutritional influences on different cancers plus specific chapters on the commonly occurring cancers. Nutritional genomics based studies show that some dietary components modulate carcinogenesis through complex cellular and molecular mechanisms. A better understanding of these different cellular and molecular mechanisms is needed to establish efficient dietary recommendations for cancer prevention. This book will provide such an understanding serving as an important book for all those working in nutritional health food science and cancer research.

Nutritional Oncology George L. Blackburn, Vay Liang W. Go, John Milner, 2011-05-02 Nutritional oncology is an increasingly active interdisciplinary field where cancer is investigated as both a systemic and local disease originating with the changes in the genome and progressing through a multi step process which may be influenced at many points in its natural history by nutritional factors that could impact the prevention of cancer the quality of life of cancer patients and the risk of cancer recurrence in the rapidly increasing population of cancer survivors.

Since the first edition of this book was published in 1999 the idea that there is a single gene pathway or single drug will provide a cure for cancer has given way to the general view that dietary environmental factors impact the progression of genetic and cellular changes in common forms of cancer This broad concept can now be investigated within a basic and clinical research context for specific types of cancer This book attempts to cover the current available knowledge in this new field of nutritional oncology written by invited experts This book attempts to provide not only the theoretical and research basis for nutritional oncology but will offer the medical oncologist and other members of multidisciplinary groups treating cancer patients practical information on nutrition assessment and nutritional regimens including micronutrient and phytochemical supplementation The editors hope that this volume will stimulate increased research education and patient application of the principles of nutritional oncology NEW TO THIS EDITION Covers hot new topics of nutrigenomics and nutrigenetics in cancer cell growth Includes new chapters on metabolic networks in cancer cell growth nutrigenetics and nutrigenomics Presents substantially revised chapters on breast cancer and nutrition prostate cancer and nutrition and colon cancer and nutrition Includes new illustrations throughout the text especially in the breast cancer chapter Includes integrated insights into the unanswered questions and clearly defined objectives of research in nutritional oncology Offers practical guidelines for clinicians advising malnourished cancer patients and cancer survivors on diet nutrition and lifestyle Provides information on the role of bioactive substances dietary supplements phytochemicals and botanicals in cancer prevention and treatment

Nutrition and Cancer
Raymond Shamberger, 2012-12-06

The importance of environmental factors in the etiology of the major degenerative diseases including cancers is now generally accepted. Evidence obtained from studies with experimental animals and from human populations associates nutritional factors and dietary constituents with the causation of cancers at different sites in the body. Estimates by epidemiologists based on comparisons of various population groups have indicated that as much as 50% of the cancer mortality may be influenced by diet. An important indicator is found in migrants to the United States or to other countries who develop the spectrum of cancers typical for the United States or other countries but different from that reported for their native country. About 20% of all deaths, 450,000 per year in the United States, are caused by cancer. In addition, as the population grows, the number of cancer cases steadily increases, but the age-adjusted total cancer incidence and mortality rates for sites other than the respiratory tract cancers, primarily attributable to cigarette smoking, have remained stable during the last 30 to 40 years. If one-half of these cancers are associated with dietary practices, an understanding of the process could save about 225,000 lives each year. The causes of cancer have been an important area of cancer research for many years. Certainly, if one understands how the diet or the environment affects cancer, great insights might be gained into the mechanisms of cancer as well.

Nutrition, Diet and Cancer Sharmila Shankar, Rakesh K. Srivastava, 2012-03-13

Chemoprevention of cancer has been the focus of intensive research for more than two decades. Epidemiological evidence has shown a small but significant association between fruit and vegetable intake and a reduction in cancer risk. Diet may account for about thirty-five percent of cancer. Large claims have been made for the effectiveness of particular diets in determining one's risk of developing cancer, ranging from protection against cancer initiation, progression, and metastasis. A wide array of dietary components has been demonstrated to be as effective in fighting off cancer. Towards an increased understanding of the nutrition, exercise, and diet in preventing cancer or inhibiting its progression, has led to the discovery and development of novel and effective drugs that regulate intracellular signaling networks in the body. This information will be very useful to explore novel and highly effective chemopreventive strategies for reducing the health burden of cancer. Hippocrates, who proclaimed 25 centuries ago, "Let food be thy medicine and medicine be thy food." They estimated that one-third of all cancer cases could be prevented by a healthier diet, statements which are widely accepted in the scientific literature. This book covers the current state of the art knowledge on the impact of nutrition and diet with nutrigenetics, nutritional epigenomics, nutritional transcriptomics, proteomics, and metabolomics approach in cancer prevention and therapy.
