Curve fitting - motivation

For root finding, we used a given function to identify where it crossed zero where does $f(x) = 0$??

Q: Where does this given function $f(x)$ come from in the first place?

- Analytical models of phenomena (e.g. equations from physics)
- Create an equation from observed data

1) Interpolation (connect the data-dots)

If data is reliable, we can plot it and connect the dots

This is piece-wise, linear interpolation

This has limited use as a general function $f(x)$

Since its really a group of small $f(x)$ s, connecting one point to the next it doesn't work very well for data that has built in random error (scatter)

2) Curve fitting - capturing the trend in the data by assigning a single function across the entire range.
The example below uses a straight line function

A straight line is described generically by $f(x) = ax + b$

The goal is to identify the coefficients 'a' and 'b' such that $f(x)$ 'fits' the data well
