- Training: Training is a critical element of success in the ERM. It involves providing employees with the knowledge, skills, and abilities needed to effectively manage risk. Training should be tailored to the specific roles and responsibilities of employees and should be ongoing and iterative.
- Communication: Effective communication is essential for the success of the ERM. It involves ensuring that all employees are aware of the ERM and its objectives, and that they understand their role in managing risk. Communication should be clear, concise, and consistent, and should be tailored to the needs of different audiences.
- Integration: The ERM should be integrated with the organization's other management systems, such as financial management, human resources, and information technology. This will ensure that the ERM is not a standalone system, but rather a part of the overall management framework.
- Measurement and Monitoring: The ERM should be measured and monitored to ensure that it is effective and that it is achieving its objectives. This involves setting key performance indicators (KPIs) and regularly reviewing the ERM's performance against these KPIs.
- Reporting: The ERM should be reported to the board of directors and other senior management. This will ensure that the board and senior management are aware of the ERM's performance and can provide guidance and support as needed.
- Review and Improvement: The ERM should be reviewed and improved regularly. This involves assessing the ERM's effectiveness and identifying areas for improvement. The ERM should be updated to reflect changes in the organization's risk profile and in the external environment.

Experimental Control Subjects

- Representing Prime Minister Churchill the 'Transformation of England' programme in January 1938 to transform over 500 districts in 20 years. These districts have been defined as 11 key Performance Indicators (KPIs) across the country. Exceeding one of the country with 50% weight attached. Composite and sector-wise rating of the districts in the country have not been assessed. A full year's performance assessment. But the country's performance.
