South Shore Larry McCormick, 1984 The south shore of Long Island one of New York's greatest recreational assets is receding at the rate of up to six feet per year In many cases efforts to halt this erosion actually have increased it Buildings once thought safely constructed back from high tidemarks today protrude far into the water Even more the number of homes and facilities built too close to the sea's edge has dramatically increased making the south shore probably less ready to withstand a major storm than at the time of the cataclysmic hurricane of 1938 Thus the question of what to do now to overcome and avoid these hazards takes on real urgency Pointing to past mistakes many Long Islanders insist that only by acting in an informed reasonable way can safe and environmentally sound development be possible for everyone upon its physical characteristics appealing landscape cultural heritage natural resources and rich marine and terrestrial biodiversity This resource is thus the foundation for the well being and economic viability of present and future generations of coastal zone residents The pressure on coastal environments is also being exacerbated by rapid changes in global climate The value of the coastal zone to humanity and the enormous pressure on it provide strong incentives for a greater scientific understanding which can ensure effective coastal engineering practice and efficient and sustainable management Coastal Engineering Processes Theory and Design Practice is the only book providing a thorough introduction to all aspects of coastal processes morphology and design of coastal defences The use of detailed and state of the art modelling techniques are an important theme of this book and there are numerous case studies showing actual examples where mathematical modelling has been applied through engineering judgement With thorough coverage of the theory and practical demonstration of the applications Coastal Engineering Processes Theory and Design Practice is a must have for all students and engineers working in coastal management and engineering
