Duplication	Overlap	Fragmentation	Cost Savings
Activities that are essentially the same, but administered through different agencies or programs.	Activities are similar enough in scope and action that the same people might benefit from all of them.	Activities that are working toward different parts of the same goal inefficiently.	Opportunities to cut costs or collecting additional revenue if the government took action to encourage payment.
For example, at one Air Force base, Dept. of Defense maintains 8 separate satellite ground control systems operating 10 satellites.	For example, some people receive disability pay from Social Security Administration plus unemployment benefits from Labor and states.	For example, in 2013, Congress put restrictions on military development of separate combat uniforms, which will equal savings over time.	For example, IRS could collect some delinquent federal taxes, by, for example, limiting passport issuance for individuals with tax debt.
