

Analysis of Reflective Piece

In the reflective piece: "A Broken Childhood", the interactions between the characters brings out several elements of communication. However, only two will be analysed and they are dialectal variation and communicative behaviour.

Throughout the reflective piece different dialectal variation was used by the characters. Miss Joy spoke mainly the acrolect variation (standard English) and one can deduce that Miss Joy spoke that way because her level of educational attainment as seen in this example: "Is that how you speak to an adult little girl?" It should be noted that Miss Joy used the dialect variation when they were angered as seen this example of Miss Joy's speech: "That's the reason why some poison our dog, so some can come in here and thief"! Miss Joy used creole as it is more emotive than the acrolect variation. Nicky spoke only in basilect variation (deep patois) which illustrates that she as a low educational attainment and poor mannerism as seen in this example: "What gal tap mess up di blasted place".

Examples of communicative behaviours were illustrated by the characters in the drama piece. Vocalics was used by Nicky when was calling her daughter as illustrated in this example: "[shouting] "Come back here"!!!! Vocalics is used to denote emotions by the use of pitch, volume and tone. Proxemics was show by Monique when she ran out of the house crying. Monique used space to show that didn't want to be around her mother. Monique also used body language to show emotions when her mom was cursing her, gestures such as crying, screaming, throwing down the broom and running out of the house shows her emotional hurt and resentment towards her mother.
