A History of the French Novel (to the Close of the 19th Century): From the beginning to 1800 George Saintsbury, 1917

A History of the French Novel: From the Beginning to the Close of the 19th Century (Complete) George Saintsbury, Although I have already in two places given a somewhat precise account of the manner in which fiction in the modern sense of the term and especially prose fiction came to occupy a province in modern literature which had been so scantily and infrequently cultivated in ancient times it would hardly be proper to enter upon the present subject with a mere reference to these other treatments. It is a matter of practically no controversy or at least of none in which it is worth while to take a part that the history of prose fiction before the Christian era is very nearly a blank and that in the fortunately still fairly abundant remains of poetic fiction the story is the least part as Dryden says in another sense or at least the telling of the story in our modern sense is so. Homer in the Odyssey at any rate Herodotus in what was certainly not intentional fiction at all and Xenophon are about the only Greek writers who can tell a story for the magnificent narrative of Thucydides in such cases as those of the Plague and the Syracusan cataclysm shows all the headstrong ethos of the author in its positive refusal to assume a story character. In Latin there is nothing before Livy and Ovid of whom the one falls into the same category with Herodotus and Xenophon and the other admirable raconteur as he is thinks first of his poetry. Scattered tales we have mimes and other things there are some and may have been more. But on the whole the schedule is not filled there are no entries for the competition. In later classical literature both Greek and Latin the state of things alters considerably though even then it cannot be said that fiction proper that is to say either prose or verse in which the accomplishment of the form is distinctly subordinate to the interesting treatment of the subject constitutes a very large department or even any regular department at all. If Lucius of Patrae was a real person and much before Lucian he may dispute with Petronius that first century Maupassant or Meredith or both combined the actual foundation of the novel as we have it but Lucian himself and Apuleius strangely enough handling the same subject in the two languages give securer and more solid starting places Yet nothing follows Apuleius though some time after Lucian the Greek romance of which we have still a fair number of examples spread however over a still larger number of centuries establishes itself in a fashion It does one thing indeed which in a way refounds or even founds the whole conception it establishes the heroine There are certainly feminine persons sometimes not disagreeable who play conspicuous and by no means mute or unpractical parts in both Greek and Latin versions of the Ass Legend but one can hardly call them heroines There need be no chicane about the application of that title to Chloe or to Chariclea to Leucippe or to her very remarkable rival to Anthia or to Hysmine Without the heroine you can hardly have romance the novel without her though her individuality may be put in commission is an absolute impossibility The connection between these curious performances with the much larger number of things like them which we know to have existed on the one side and the Western mediaeval romance on the other has been at various times matter of considerable controversy but it need not trouble us much here The Greek romance was to have very great influence on the French novel later on the earlier composition generally called by the same name as itself it would seem to have had next to none Until we come to Floire et Blanchefleur and perhaps Parthenopex things of a comparatively late stage obviously post Crusade and so necessarily exposed to and pretty clearly patient of Greek Eastern influence there is nothing in Old French which shows even the same kinship to the Greek stories as the Old English Apollonius of Tyre which was probably or rather certainly in the original Greek itself The sources of French romance I must take leave to request a truce of God as to the application of that term and of epic for present purposes appear to have been two the Saint s Life and the patriotic or family saga the latter in the first place indelibly affected by the Mahometan incursions of the eighth ninth and tenth centuries The story telling instinct kindled by or at first devoted to these subjects subsequently fastened on numerous others In fact almost all was fish that came to the magic net of Romance and though two great subjects of ours the Matter of Britain the Arthurian Legend and the Matter of Rome classical story generally including the Tale of Troy came traditionally to rank themselves with the Matter of France and with the great range of hagiology which it might have been dangerous to proclaim a fourth matter even if anybody had been likely to take the view that it was so these classifications are like most of their kind more specious than satisfactory

Historical Dictionary of French Literature John Flower, 2013-01-17 Almost all of us know French literature even if we don t know French because it is probably the second largest and certainly the most translated into English And even if we don t read we would have seen film and television versions think Count of Monte Cristo and even a musical rendition Les Mis So this is a particularly interesting volume in the literature series since it covers French literature from the earliest times to the present It is also a particularly rich literature espousing ever genre from poetry to novel to biography to drama and adopting every style including realism and surrealism and expressing the views of all classes and political stands with recently strong feminist and gay strains Obviously the core dictionary section includes among its panoply of often substantial and detailed entries hundreds of authors dozens of significant works the various styles mentioned above and many others events that have impacted literature such as the Dreyfus Affair and the Algerian War and literary prizes The chronology manages to cover about 1 200 years of literary output And the introduction sets it all out neatly from one historical and literary period to the next The bibliography broken down by period and author directs us to further reading in both French and English

Historical sketch of French literature Marcel Rosey, 1895 The History of Canada: Canada under French rule William Kingsford, 1889 The Graphic Unconscious in Early Modern French Writing Tom Conley, 1992-10-08 This book studies the importance of typographic shapes in French Renaissance literature in the context of psychoanalysis and of the history of printed writing Focusing on the poetry of Clement Marot Rabelais's Gargantua Ronsard's sonnets and the Essais of Montaigne it argues that printed characters can either supplement or betray what they appear to articulate They often reveal compositional patterns that do not appear to be under authorial control and open political and subjective dimensions through the interaction of verbal and visual materials This unconscious proto Freudian writing has complex historical relations with practices found in the media of the twentieth century

Gender, Rhetoric, and Print Culture in French Renaissance Writing Floyd Gray, 2000-05-25 In this book Floyd Gray explores how the treatment of controversial subjects in French Renaissance writing was affected both by rhetorical conventions and by the commercial requirements of an expanding publishing industry Focusing on a wide range of discourses on gender issues misogynist feminist autobiographical homosexual and medical Gray reveals the extent to which these marginalized texts reflect literary concerns rather than social reality He then moves from a close analysis of the rhetorical factor in the Querelle des femmes to consider ways in which writing as a textual phenomenon inscribes its own sometimes ambiguous meaning Gray offers richly detailed readings of writing by Rabelais Jean Flore Montaigne Louise Lab Pernette du Guillet and Marie de Gournay among others challenging the inherent anachronism of those forms of criticism that fail to take account of the rhetorical and cultural conditions of the period
