

Open Addressing versus Chaining

- Donald E. Knuth derived the following formula for the expected number of comparisons, c , required for finding an item that is in a hash table using open addressing with linear probing and a load factor L :

- Using chaining, if an item is in the table, on average we must examine the table element corresponding to the item's hash code and then half of the items in each list.

$$c = 1 + \frac{L}{2}$$

where L is the average number of items in a list (the number of items divided by the table size).

Department of State, 1948 Lawyers' Skills 2007-2008 Julian S. Webb, 2007 Lawyers Skills takes into account the Written Standards published by the Law Society of England It addresses all the skills that are integral to the modern lawyer's practice The text introduces students to the theory underpinning these skills and is supported by reflective exercises and examples from practice. Importantly, the methodology employed allows students to continue their learning beyond the law school. Each chapter contains a clear statement of learning outcomes and the text is interspersed with questions and exercises designed to encourage and facilitate learning. Chapter summaries, tables, flowcharts, and practical examples are also used extensively throughout. The text places skills in the context of the general ethical and client care principles which govern modern legal practice. This guide is essential reading for all students and a useful reference for practitioners.

volume examines the prosecution as an institution and a function in a dozen international and hybrid criminal tribunals from Nuremberg to the International Criminal Court It is the result of a sustained collaborative effort among some twenty scholars and former tribunal staffers The starting point is that the prosecution shapes a tribunal's practice and legacy more than any other organ and that a systematic examination of international prosecutors is therefore warranted The chapters are organized chronologically according to the successive phases of the life of the institution and the various stages of the trials The analysis includes each institution's establishment mandate and jurisdiction as well as the prosecutorial framework and strategy the prosecutor's external relations and the completion of the institution's work The book also considers the prosecutors' independence and impartiality and their accountability for their decisions The volume thus provides a comprehensive picture of the mandate organization and operation of the prosecution in international criminal trials As the first comprehensive study of an international legal actor whose decisions have widespread political repercussions this book will be essential reading for all with an interest in international criminal justice
