Clinical Performance of Skeletal Prostheses J.

Wilson, Larry Hench, 2012-12-06 Larry L Hench June Wilson OBJECTIVE Millions of people presently enjoy an improved quality of life due to prostheses which repair augment or replace parts of their skeletal system bones joints teeth etc However all replacement parts have a finite probability of survival The goal of this book is to compare the survivability data for various skeletal prosthesis systems All data derive from previously published clinical studies Where possible statistical comparisons are made and the reasons for failure are discussed THE NEED FOR SKELETAL PROSTHESES We are an aging population with more than 100 million people in the U S and Europe over the age of 50 years An unfortunate consequence of aging is a progressive deterioration of the quality of skeletal tissues From the age of 30 years there is a decrease in bone mass for both men and women Fig 1 1 However for women it is much greater and between 40 and 60 years of age the rate of deterioration of long bones and vertebrae of women is especially severe due to hormonal changes By the age of 70 most women will have lost from 35 to 60% of their bone mass The loss of volume of cancellous or trabecular bone leads to a large decrease in mechanical compressive strength Fig 1 2 The clinical consequence is an increasing incidence of vertebral collapse Cortical bone decreases in tensile strength with age Fig 1

LoPresti, 2002-12-16 Work in the field of neuroprosthetics requires multidisciplinary teams but these collaborators must meet on common ground to develop an understanding of the capabilities and limitations of each part of a bioengineering project The Handbook of Neuroprosthetic Methods provides a comprehensive resource for the techniques methodologies and options

Biomaterials in Otology J.J. Grote, 2012-12-06 The need for better implant materials was a stimulus for the increasing knowledge of Biomaterial Scientists Different surgical disciplines were very successful in the use of prostheses especially because they based their surgery on a good cooperation with fundamental scientists The use of alloplastic implant materials in the reconstruction of the middle ear has not always been successful We all know the initial success in the sixties and the disappointments after short term follow up periods Because of these failures Otology missed contact with the new developments in Biomaterial Science However we must realize that in the reconstruction of a sound conducting system our most successful results are achieved with alloplastic implants John Shea introduced the use of Teflon prostheses in the restoration of hearing in otosclerosis and ever since this has been the most rewarding reconstructive middle ear operation With the development of the intact canal wall techniques and the use of homologous implant materials the problems of middle ear surgery seem to be solved. However, we now know that closed techniques have disadvantages after longer post-operative periods and the use of homologous implant materials give problems. Collection of these implants is not always easy and the preservation is still in discussion. Furthermore, problems of resorption, rejection or fixation give uncertain post-operative results. Middle ear prostheses of different new implant materials are promoted by industry and good results are published but also disappointments after shorter or longer periods.
