Remaking American Communities David C. Soule, 2007-11-01 Urban sprawl has gained much national attention in recent years. Sprawl involves not only land use issues but also legal, political, and social concerns. It affects our schools, the environment, and race relations. Comprehensive enough for high school students and also appropriate for college undergraduates, Remaking American Communities delves into the challenges of urban sprawl by turning to some of America's top thinkers on the problem, including Robert Yaro, president of the Regional Plan Association. Other cutting-edge essays include a foreword about the emergence of sprawl by nationally syndicated columnist Neal Peirce, views about race and class by former mayor of Albuquerque David Rusk, and a discussion of transportation dynamics by Curtis Johnson, president of the CitiStates Group. The essays in this collection explore the core issues of sprawl and the agenda for dealing with it. Complete with a glossary, resources, and contact information for smart growth alliances, this book is extremely user-friendly. David C. Soule offers an unbiased viewpoint of this national phenomenon in a way that will be accessible to students and those with little background in the issue.

Environmental Communication and Community Tarla Peterson, Hanna Bergeå, Andrea Feldpausch-Parker, Kaisa Raitio, 2016-04-28 As society has become increasingly aware of environmental issues, the challenge of structuring public participation opportunities that strengthen democracy while promoting more sustainable communities has become crucial for many natural resource agencies, industries, interest groups, and publics. The processes of negotiating between the often disparate values held by these diverse groups and formulating and implementing policies that enable people to fulfil goals associated with these values can strengthen communities as well as tear them apart. This book provides a critical examination of the role communication plays in social transition through both construction and destruction of community. The authors examine the processes and practices put in play when people who may or may not have previously seen themselves as interconnected communicate with each other, often in situations where they are competing for the same resources. Drawing upon a diverse selection of case studies on the American, Asian, and European continents, the chapters chart a range of approaches to environmental communication, including symbolic construction, modes of organising, and agonistic politics of communication. This volume will be of great interest to researchers, teachers, and practitioners of environmental communication, environmental conflict, community development, and natural resource management.

Process Management Hans de Bruijn, Ernst ten Heuvelhof, Roel in 't Veld, 2010-08-13 End pro t and loss account As a result there will be a stage at which the parties have developed relations and prospects of gain while there are still a number of problems that are dif cult to solve and that fail to evoke consensus Each party will then draw up a pro t and loss account On the positive side of the balance are the relations developed and the gains collected on the negative side there are the losses and the unsolved problems For particular parties who have no interest in the problem the latter side is uninteresting for others who have an interest in a particular solution of this problem it represents a form of loss Pro t and loss balance positive for a critical mass speed The speed of the process will increase if the pro t and loss account shows a positive balance for a critical mass of parties They wish to collect their gains and therefore to make nal decisions At this point there will be an important psychological mec nism parties tend to anticipate on collecting their gains which increases their urge to speed up the process It is clear from the above however that the end of a process is dif cult to predict
